KING'S CONDITION AGAIN ALARMS

FARMER IS KILLED WHILE WORKING IN FIELD

U. S. PROSPEROUS? WILL THINKS 'DRY' AWARD PROVES IT

(Special To The News)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—This is a prosperous country without a doubt.

Did you read where some fellow got twenty-five thousand as a prize just for saying: "Make liquor so high that the bootlegger can't sell it at a profit."

Then the producer will sell direct to the customer, and it will only cut out the middle man, the same thing they have tried to do in every industry since the world began, and haven't succeeded.

Now if a man got twenty-five thousand for suggesting that, what ought some fellow get for suggesting one that would work?

A California boy suggested education, but it's the educated that's doing all the drinking.

Yours for bigger prizes and better suggestions,

WILL.

PA NEWC OBSERVES

There is also a unique property decoration on Norwood avenue, that has not heretofore been mentioned, that is deserving of some commendation.

One of the letter carriers yesterday showed Pa Newc a letter which had been addressed on the back, the address being written on the side where the flap was pasted down.

State auto licenses numbers are climbing rapidly. Those in the seven hundred thousand section are now making their appearance on cars.

One downtown pet shop collected quite a crowd around its show window on Thursday afternoon. When Pa Newc pased he wondered at the size of the crowd and decided to find out the cause for it. On investigation the reason was visibly revealed. There were two black collie pups and a monkey in the same cage. They were having the greatest fun.

On East Winter avenue, where every home has an outside Christmas tree decorated with vari-colored electrical lights and adorned with beautiful trimmings, another resident has ushered in something new. Mr. and Mrs. Julius Blaha have a Santa Claus illuminated before their home. Wonder who'll be next with another idea?

If there is one place in the world where weighty questions, like the cruiser bill, the Boulder dam law and others that are more or less frivolous, are settled with an amazing finality, it is the central fire station on South Jefferson street. The boys like an argument, and usually settle questions which have puzzled diplomats for decades in a few moments.

Jim Morng, the one-time sage of Croton avenue, his friends will be glad to know, is well and happy at his Kansas home. Of course, he misses the tool house and the tool house gang, but to read a letter written by Jim to the boys one can see that he is happy.

While it is a fact that the circulation at the library dropped off during Christmas week, that does not prove a thing. For, Pa Newc likes to believe, they were reading the books they got for Christmas. Grandmother read Mother India, or The Wild Party, while the son of the house was immersed in The Rise of the Dutch Republic. Perhaps!

Gift books, like gift horses, cannot be looked in the mouth. At the present time Pa Newc is thinking of the mighty tome he received: a poetry book, with initial letters of each verse illuminated in red ink. It was one of the works of Tennyson—bound to go to the attic, for only paper back poets go to Pa Newc's Sabine farm with him.

Then there is the story of the young man who journeyed 20 miles or more Thursday afternoon to see William Tilden II play four of a neigh-

A. A. Redmond Is Accident Victim During Morning

Falls From Seat Of Manure Spreading Machine And Is Killed

TEAM BRINGS BODY BACK TO BARN SHED

Discovery Of Tragic Accident Is Made By J. B. Elder About Noon

His head terribly lacerated where the sharp prongs of a manure spreader had struck it, A. A. Redmond, aged about 50, of Neshannock township, was found dead in a shed next to the barn of his employer, J. B. Elder, of Fayette, this county, shortly before noon today.

Mr. Redmond, at about nine o'clock this morning, left the barn of Mr. Elder with a team and the manure spreader for a field about half a mile away. Mr. Elder then left home, and when he returned at noon he found the team and manure spreader standing in a shed next to the barn. Mr. Redmond's body was impaled on the machine.

Coroner J. P. Caldwell of New Castle was called immediately and is investigating the case.

Evidently the accident occurred while the machine was in the field. It is thought that the man lost his balance and fell onto the sharp teeth in the bed of the spreader, thus causing his death.

E. D. Wagner of Fayette saw the team going through the field, no driver on the seat. The team made two turns, passing through two gates perfectly, and finally halting in the shed, where the body was found by Mr. Elder, in making the trip from the field.

It is thought that Mr. Redmond's death was almost instantaneous, coming but a short time after he had fallen off the seat of the spreader. He is survived by his wife and two children.

Ends Own Life After Illness

Chas. A. McCready Found Dead At Home On Shaw Street

ILL SEVERAL WEEKS WITH FLU ATTACK

While suffering from a highly nervous condition following an attack of influenza, Charles A. McCready of 301 Shaw street, shot himself through the head with a revolver shortly after 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Mr. McCready, who was in the insurance business with offices located in the Lawrence Savings and Trust Building, had not been able to be at his office for about five weeks, until yesterday. Although he was in a greatly weakened condition, on account of his long illness, he managed to stay at the office from shortly after lunch until about 4 p. m. when he returned to his home.

In response to a question from Mrs. McCready as to how he was feeling he said that he was rather tired, and believed that he would lie down. He proceeded upstairs to his room. Shortly after Mrs. McCready, who was in a down stairs room, heard a report which she thought was caused by an automobile tire blowout, as they had frequently occurred on the hill west of her home. Looking out and not seeing any car, she called to Mr. McCready to see if he had heard the noise. Not receiving any response she ran upstairs and found Mr. McCready lying on a bed with a gun by his side.

Although almost prostrated by the shock Mrs. McCready managed to get to the telephone and summon a doctor who arrived within a few minutes. Finding Mr. McCready was dead, Coroner Caldwell was called.

Mr. McCready had not been in very robust health for the past year or two. When he was taken down with influenza about five weeks ago he was in poor physical condition to withstand the ravages of the disease. While he was apparently on the road to recovery, he was in a highly nervous condition. It is believed that this condition affected his mind to

CHANGE AGE LIMITS FOR SCHOOL ATHLETES

Educational Association Resolution Would Make 20 Years Limit

Also To Allow Ninth Graders On High Teams; New Castle Invites Meeting

(International News Service)

READING, Pa., Dec. 28.—Election of officers and selection of a site for next year's convention occupied the 4,000 delegates to the 67th annual Pennsylvania State Education Association session today.

Francis D. Haas, principal of the Bloomsburg Teachers' College, and C. R. Foster, principal of the Indiana Normal School, were nominated for the post of president. G. W. Armstrong, principal of the Lock Haven Teachers' College, was unopposed for the post of first vice president, as was Landis Tanger, superintendent of the Reading public schools, for the post of second vice president. Tanger is a former president of the association.

New Castle Invites

Invitations were received from New Castle, Uniontown and Philadelphia for next year's convention.

Passage of a resolution enabling a ninth grade junior high pupil to compete in senior high athletic contests was looked upon as the outstanding act of the business session affecting students. The act also would permit a high school student to compete on athletic teams for four years instead of three, as at present.

Twenty years was decided upon as the age limit for any student to compete in high school athletics, regardless of what grade the contestant might be in. The day a student passes his 20th birthday anniversary he automatically becomes ineligible to participate in high school athletics under the ruling.

Large numbers of students in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Scranton, Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre and other large cities of the state will become eligible to compete in senior high athletic contests under the junior high ruling.

The car burst into flames. Mrs. Louise Paugh, 28, and Mrs. Elmer Smith, 18, of Detroit, were burned. They are in the Somerset hospital.

The car had been stopped while chains were to be put on the wheels.

State Laws Too Lenient With Criminals Declares District Attorney Bryan

District Attorney J. Elder Bryan believes that a life imprisonment law for fourth felony offenders would be a step towards the curbing of crime in Pennsylvania. Not a blanket bill that would mandatorily imprison a man for life upon conviction for a fourth felony regardless of where it was committed, but a bill that would provide life imprisonment for four convictions under the Pennsylvania law, for crimes of violence.

"Our laws are altogether too lenient upon criminals," said Mr. Bryan. "Too many prison reform societies and like organizations have helped to weaken our criminal prosecutions and its time that we clamped down. While I would not care to see a life imprisonment law such as Michigan has, yet when a man commits four crimes of violence in Pennsylvania, society is better off if he is put away."

Other Changes

"There are other changes which could well be made in the Pennsylvania statutes. At the present time a criminal is given an indeterminate sentence, the minimum of which must not be more than half of the maximum. The law never was a

Farm Bloc Wants Special Session For Farm Relief

Ask Hoover To Stay Out Of Present Short Session Of Congress

TARIFF REVISION IS ALSO SOUGHT

Iowa Congressman Declares Special Session Necessary To Redeem Pledges

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Plans are under way for the formation of a special congressional delegation to call upon President Elect Herbert Hoover upon his return here and urge him to adopt a "hands off" policy on agricultural legislation in the present short session, it was learned today.

The proposal is understood to be based upon a belief that no legislation can be enacted if Mr. Hoover remains silent and that he then will call a special session shortly after March 4.

Want Special Session

The prospect of the President-elect's return and his reported desire to head off a special session apparently has not shaken militant members of the so-called "farm bloc" in their policy.

Representative L. J. Dickinson (R.) of Iowa, declared an extra session for both farm relief and tariff legislation is necessary to redeem the Republican party's pre-election promises.

"The Republican party cannot afford to be put in a position where it can be said that our election pledges are repudiated," said Dickinson.

"The Hoover farm program which was 'sold' to the Middle West included not only his legislative recommendations but a Hoover person-

Negro Prisoner Kills Sergeant; Girl Kidnapped

POSSES ARE NOW HUNTING KILLER

(International News Service)

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 28.—Armed posses scoured the vicinity of Parchman state prison, in Sunflower county, today, for Charles Shepherd, 55 year old negro murderer, who escaped from jail before daylight after killing Sergeant J. B. Duvall, 65, and kidnaping his 18 year old daughter, according to advices received here.

The negro slayer, who was serving a life term, escaped, made his way to Sergeant Duvall's home nearby, slashed and beat Duvall to death, and then made away with his daughter, according to information furnished by prison officials.

Bloodstains were found in the girl's room adjoining her father's, and Duvall's room itself was literally a wreck, indicating that a terrific struggle took place preceding the murder.

Several hundred armed citizens were in the posse that began the man-hunt. Bloodhounds picked up the trail of the negro near the prison, and the hunt proceeded in the direction of Memphis.

Duvall's wife was in the house at the time, but did not hear the disturbance in another part of the home.

The crime was not discovered, it was believed, until several hours after it was committed.

Governor Fisher And Legislature Are In Harmony

State's Chief Executive And General Assembly To Work Together

FORMER GOVERNORS HAD DIFFICULTIES

Believe Fisher's Program Will Be Given Attention By State Lawmakers

By ROBERT F. GORMAN.
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Dec. 28—Pennsylvania's general assembly will convene at noon next Tuesday and for the first time in four administrations a Pennsylvania governor will have the pleasure of witnessing the opening of his second legislative session with harmony existing between the executive and legislative branches of the state government.

Governor John S. Fisher will find the same harmonious relations existing at the beginning of the 1929 session as existed at the opening of the 1927 session. This condition which leaders were almost believing was fast becoming a lost art so far as second sessions of governors were concerned has been brought about by Governor Fisher himself who has confined his activities to state matters and has not sought the higher gifts which voters have to offer.

Unlike Preceding Governors.

Three governors serving terms immediately preceding that of Governor Fisher openly sought the office of President against the wishes of party leaders in Pennsylvania and their activities during the period between their first and second legislative sessions resulted in each instance in estrangement at the opening of second sessions.

Former Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, the late Governar William C. Sproul and former Governor Gifford Pinchot each got into difficulties by letting it be known that they had presidential aspirations. Answinging, head-chopping and ill-feeling resulted and bitterness was carried into each governors second legislative session.

Governor Fisher has steered a differed course and during the period between his first and second sessions

Flu Epidemic Recedes In West

U. S. Health Officials Report Disease Not As Virulent As In 1918

PNEUMONIA DEATHS FOLLOWING FLU

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—An analysis of reports of the rapid spread of the influenza epidemic by public health bureau experts today indicated that there is no present danger of the disease approaching the virulency of that of 1918, when a half-million died.

Officials were greatly encouraged at that fact that the situation in California, Montana and other states where the epidemic is receding is satisfactory and that pneumonia is not developing as seriously as was first feared.

Epidemic Widespread

While the epidemic is fully as widespread as that of the war winter, the mortality rate continues comparatively low. As the disease sweeps into the East the death rate undoubtedly will increase owing to the population congestion and cold weather, but not with the severity of 1918.

At Surgeon General Cumming's office it was stated that the greater number of deaths from influenza may be anticipated as the epidemic declines in number of cases. In this stage of the disease pneumonia is more likely to develop.

Although deaths have been more numerous in California and Montana in the last week, the rate is still comparatively low, indicating, according to the health service that the epidemic will not become highly fatal.

California Officials Search Mojave Desert For Alleged Wreckers Of Train

FORMER EMPLOYES HELD RESPONSIBLE

(International News Service)

VICTORVILLE, Cal., Dec. 28.—With reinforcements and renewed efforts posses consisting of railroad agents, sheriff's deputies and peace officers today searched the Mojave desert and bordering hills for a band of train wreckers who were thought to have caused the derailment of the Missionary, crack Santa Fe train, Thursday morning.

Railroad officials today had changed the theory that robbery had been the motive for tampering with the tracks of the Santa Fe system, and advanced the assertion they believed it was a "revenge plot" perpetrated by disgruntled employes.

That the persons who removed a tangent rail on the offside of a downgrade curve were familiar with track work was shown when it was discovered they had not disturbed the wires of the block signal system. Tools used in the work, said to have been taken from a tool shed along the right of way, were found near the scene of the accident.

England Again Grows Anxious About Monarch

King George Is In State Of Grave Exhaustion, Says Bulletin

LOCAL CONDITIONS SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Official Announcement Of Afternoon Says Condition Is Unchanged

By HARRY R. FLORY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Anxiety over King George's condition, which was somewhat allayed over the Christmas holiday by the absence of disquieting news in the meager medical bulletins, again gained force this afternoon.

A doctors' bulletin at noon noted improvement in local conditions, but it admitted that general conditions did not show the same progress. The king is in a state of grave exhaustion. It is difficult to administer nourishment. New measures are being undertaken to combat weakness.

Prince of Wales Calls

The Prince of Wales called at the palace twice during the morning. Princess Mary, the king's daughter, cancelled a proposed trip to Leeds.

It was authoritatively stated that improvement in local conditions is not paramount.

It has not been revealed what new treatment is being tried to lessen the general exhaustion.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Official announcement that King George's condition was unchanged was made at Buckingham Palace shortly after three o'clock this afternoon. Lord Dawson of Penn revisited the palace at 2:30, remaining half an hour.

Kramer Ready To Follow Hassell In New Attempt

Parker Kramer, Clarion Killer, Willing To Make New Flight Over Greenland

(International News Service)

BRADFORD, Pa., Dec. 28.—Parker Kramer of Clarion, Pa., who with Bert Hassell of Rockford, Ill., was lost in the icy wilds of Greenland for two weeks when the doughty pair sought to reach Stockholm, Sweden, by air last summer, is ready and anxious to follow Hassell in a second attempt, he said here today.

"I'm ready and willing whenever Mr. Hassell is," Kramer told International News Service.

Kramer acted as navigator on the Greater Rockford flight last year.

"Any definite information on a second proposed flight must come from Hassell, who is leader of the expedition," Kramer said. "Naturally, I'm willing and anxious to try again, however." Plans for any second flight rest entirely with Hassell, Kramer said.

PA NEWC OBSERVES

boring city's tennis champions. Needless to say, although the quartet of champions struggled nobly, Tilden won. New Year's eve Tilden will be in New Castle, and Pa Newc wonders if it is not possible to arrange a match with four of New Castle's best raqueteers.

With a "touch of the flu" and Christmas coming so close together, Pa Newc wonders what the poor physician and druggist does. Traffic in prescriptions has reached a high mark, according to all reports.

The first answer to the New Year's birthday roll comes from Mary Kuttesche who says that her little brother John Frank Kuttesche will be six years of age New Year's day.

James Cole, secretary of the New Castle Chamber of Commerce misses out on the New Year birthday roll by a small margin. He was born during the last hour of the last day of the last week of the last month of the year. This all means December 31 at 11:30 o'clock, No, we're not telling the year girls so don't get excited. Had Mr. Cole been born in 1899, which he wasn't he would have also added "century" to the long line of "lasts" stated above.

As you look about New Castle you wonder what all the garages and repair shops get to do. Calm yourself, brother car fixer, Barney Hanlon of the New Castle Motor club states that according to figures in recent automobile surveys there are about 260 automobiles to every repair shop. As about half the cars are on the sick list at the same time there is still room for a few more repair shops.

Reports are still being received by Pa Newc as to birthdays observed on Christmas day by local residents. Ana Boak, of New Castle, R. D. No. 6, is the latest to report celebrating a birthday anniversary on December 25.

Pa Newc was talking to a young man who had taken a bumming trip through the west during the past year. He is an eager young soul and his eyes and ears missed little of the country west of the Mississippi. When asked whether he had ever gone without eating, he replied, "No, but sometimes the meals were far between and not much of them."

Four golfing amateurs, namely: Art Prioletti, Phil Colaluca, Sleep Donnelly and Babe Clark were caught in the act of indulging in their favorite weakness on the Hubbard golf course on Christmas afternoon, a friend reports. It is evident that these players are not aware of the fact that for eight cents in postage they could become regular members of a regular goofy club. But then perhaps they may consider themselves in a class of their own. It is understood that the pasture field title of Croton was at stake in the game Tuesday afternoon.

W. H. Montgomery of Meyer avenue is another of the worthy gentlemen who arrived on old mother world on New Year's day.

The galaxy of exterior decorations in this city at this holiday season, testify to the developing civic consciousness of its citizens. No one can estimate the feeling of good will engendered by such an expression. Our citizens are to be complimented, as the displays in all parts of the city are well worth viewing.

GOVERNOR FISHER AND LEGISLATURE ARE IN HARMONY

has done nothing to gain the enemity of any party factions.

Fisher Has Program.

With harmony existing the legislature is expected to pay serious attention to Governor Fisher's first message of the new session and to aid him in carrying out his planned program for the next two years.

The governor as well as legislative leaders will insist on a short session as they did two years ago and it may be that the Republicans of the house caucus next Monday night will adopt a resolution fixing the closing day of the 1929 session. A similar resolution was presented and adopted at the house Republican caucus prior to the opening of the 1927 session.

However if January 1 sessions of other years under the present constitution have any bearing on the 1929 session which also begins on January 1, then the coming session will be longer than the 1927 session which adjourned April 14.

Since 1875 only five sessions have opened on January 1 and the shortest of these was the session of 1889 which adjourned May 9. The longest session opening January 1 was 1901 when the house and senate did not finish business until June 27. The 1929 session will probably set a new record for shortness of January 1 sessions and harmony between the governor and the legislature will undoubtedly help bring it about.

reau are far under the same locations in 1918. The census bureau plans to make a weekly tabulation of deaths, in connection with the public health service's study of the spread of the disease.

A nation-wide scientific investigation of the fly situation will be started by the health service as soon as a fund of $10,000 is available out of the annual appropriation of $400,000 for the study of epidemics. This sum will be authorized within a few days and details of the study will immediately be made by the Surgeon General.

Several cities in widely scattered sections will be selected. Experts will visit these cities and make a close study of the character the disease of the victims. The results will be submitted to Washington for a more detailed laboratory study.

The investigation will be conducted by a special board of health scientists selected by the Surgeon General. With the data collected in a study after the 1918 epidemic, and other scientific research by private and public health the probe may result in means of checking future epidemics.

So far there is no recognized preventative, except to avoid contact with infected persons. There apparently is no effective remedy to check the disease once it has started.

While Surgeon General Cumming regards the situation as "serious" he warns the public not to be alarmed. The health service does not expect more than 15,000 deaths all over the country from the epidemic.

and confer with leaders in the senate and house of representatives regarding legislative problems.

While the Utah steamed about thirty miles off the coast of northern Brazil yesterday afternoon, the president-elect was an interested spectator of a ship drill consisting of battle practice and theoretical firing of the long range guns.

President-elect Hoover will adhere strictly to a policy of "hands off legislation" until after his inauguration on March 4, it was learned today. However, Mr. Hoover is following with the closest interest the legislative situation in Washington. He receives news of each day's events by radio.

The president-elect faces an extremely busy 10 days in Washington. He has under consideration a number of problems that will engage his attention when he enters the White House. He will hold numerous conferences with party leaders regarding cabinet appointments. This task comes first with inauguration plans in the background.

So far Mr. Hoover has not intimated his attitude regarding a special session of congress.

The president-elect expects to reach Florida about January 25 and to spend some time there fishing.

Officers and crew of the Utah are making preparations for a New Year's Eve fete aboard the warship on Monday night. There will be a "watch party" to welcome the new year.

nel for the administration of the farm plan. It was the judgment of those interested in the farm cause that this would require a special session to consider farm relief legislation and tariff revision.

Favor Tariff Revision Also

"It is my hope that Mr. Hoover will be noncommittal when he comes to Washington and that a firm declaration will be forthcoming from his friends that when he assumes control on March 4 he will promptly and vigorously meet the problems that face his administration. Any other course will lead to far-reaching criticism."

Speaking as a mid-western farm relief advocate, Dickinson said that the farm group has no objection to the demand among New England congressmen for industrial revision.

"I believe that there is widespread agreement as to the need for a general readjustment of the tariff which will provide protection where it is needed and also will bring about reduction of items which lead to excess profits," he said.

Representative Thomas Williams (R.) of Illinois, a member of the House agricultural committee, said that a canvass of the Mid-West backers of farm relief legislation indicated that any attempt to pass a bill in the short session would be defeated.

STATE LAWS ARE TOO LENIENT TO CRIMINALS

good one and works to the advantage of criminals."

"Where a man is convicted of second degree murder, the most a judge can give him is from 10 to 20 years imprisonment which means parole at the end of the ten years if his behavior is good. In other words, if a man barely escapes first degree conviction which means either death or life imprisonment, he gets away with ten years. The judges should have more leeway in the sentencing of criminals for in many cases, offenders deserve the limit of the law."

"Still another change which I would suggest would be the registration of small arms. At the present time anyone can carry a gun or own a gun, with small chance of being apprehended. If owners of small arms such as revolvers were made to register them, we would have a better check upon them. I do not agree with all the provisions of the so-called Fox Bill of the last General Assembly which provided for the registration every year of all firearms. This meant that a man owning a number of shot guns, or rifles, or old fowling pieces would have to pay a registration fee every year. They could be registered once and this would serve until they were sold or transferred. Small arms that can be used, should be registered each year."

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

WHAT are you going to do about it?

The development of your home city, so that it may take the position which it is entitled is strictly up to you.

A vein of gold or a gusher of oil attracts crowds quickly. The word goes as the wind for there will always be the throng whose ears are attuned to alluring news of that character. To get rich quick is their dream and goal. A rumor is sufficient to send them on what they know is probably a fool's chase.

The most optimistic booster here does not claim that fortunes may be made without effort. There is no desire among the people for the development of Wallingfords.

There are, however, industries needed, legitimate enterprises, from which the returns on the investment will prove remunerative. Outside investors have sensed some of the attractive opportunities. They have their eye on the city.

There is something to be done for our city, now. Something which is almost as important right now as the investment of dollars and cents and that is the awakening of a great New Castle spirit. The spirit which will prompt and impel us to let the world know. Carry the message to all. Talk a greater New Castle. The message needs no exaggeration but it needs to be delivered.

Basic conditions are essentially sound and with the strengthened credit, the country is in a condition for a forward movement. There will unquestionably be a great renewal of business activities in the coming months. With this renewal we are entitled to our full share, nothing less.

We are so very much the creatures of our own will that the determination to make a better and greater New Castle, accompanied by real effort, will assuredly prove successful.

Keep this ever uppermost in your mind. Your city is going to be just what you choose to make it.

Lend a hand!

PRESIDENT "SEEING AMERICA"

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE may be ranked as a hard-working executive, but now that his term of office is drawing to a close he is wisely indulging in the relaxation to which he is entitled. Evidently he is following the advice of the author of the slogan, "See America First," because he seems to make it a point to go to some new section of the country on each succeeding trip. His holiday vacation is to be spent on Sapelo Island, off the coast of Georgia. Here he will find game and fish in abundance, and may indulge in his taste for hunting.

If he does nothing else Mr. Coolidge is sure to arouse the interest of Americans in the geography of their country. No matter what place the president may go, his visit is sure to put that locality on the map. The chief executive can never entirely leave his duties behind him in Washington; he is always accompanied by a staff of stenographers, and there is always some official business which demands his personal attention. But these trips are a needed change in the routine of white house life, and they suggest once more the desirability of a country home, within easy distance of Washington where the president may go for week-ends without the elaborate preparations which must necessarily precede his longer trips.

IBERO-AMERICAN EXPOSITION

The pendulum will apparently swing backward almost half a millenium, if the plans now in preparation are carried out as contemplated for March 15, 1929. The occasion will be the opening of the Ibero-American Exposition at Seville, Spain.

Prominent among the exhibits will be a true copy of the Santa Maria, the flagship of the fleet with which the great Genoese navigator made his westward trek, which resulted in the discovery of a new continent. The facsimile of this famous little vessel is already completed and will soon be placed at anchor in the Gaudalquiver river.

There, also, will be found the exhibit from the United States Navy Department, which will have some unusual and unique features. These include a large illuminated map illustrating the activities of the United States Shipping Board in passenger and freight lines, and showing the progress on the sea since the days of the galleon of the Spanish Armada.

This duplicate of the historic and history making little vessel will be christened by a special papal representative from Rome. The Spanish king, wearing period costume, will dine on board and eat from dishes similar to those used in the time of Columbus.

The exhibition buildings which are to house the exhibits from the United States are nearing completion. They are to remain as permanent reminders of the bond between old Spain and young America.

As is natural, electrical and mechanical devices will have prominent place in America's contribution. Among these will be a machine, installed by the United States Department of Commerce, which will count all visitors as they enter, making possible an accurate record of the total attendance.

Some of our most eminent historians contend that the birth of our country should not be dated from the discovery of the land, but rather from the culmination in revolt of the English colonies. Yet in the minds of most of us, the vision of the stalwart Columbus springing to its shores and planting thereon the flag of his patron, Isabella of Spain, begins our country's story.

What happened before that time, the ventures of former explorers, we see but as a mirage. Christopher Columbus, on the other hand, is as real to us as George Washington.

The fact that England soon wrung the supremacy from Spain, and that the present-day descendants of Great Britain far outnumber those of Spanish blood in the United States, does not detract from the glamor and romance of Spain's part in the discovery and settlement of our country. Even the fact that it bears another name from that of its most popular discoverer makes not one whit of difference in this regard.

The name of Americus Vespucius may be immortalized in that of the great double continent occupying the whole of the western hemisphere, but it is of "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean" that we sing with an enthusiasm nothing short of patriotic.

So to us, as to the land in which it occurs, this Ibero-American Exposition cannot fail to be of special interest and significance.—The Schenectady Gazette.

The world is becoming so democratic that the grand manner would be extinct except for traffic cops.

Having and Keeping.

1,000,000 Flu Cases.

New Bonfire Starts.

Dry "Influence."

By ARTHUR G. BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1928, by N. Y. American, Inc.)

If children are worth having, they are worth keeping. Athens, Ga., believes that they are worth having and keeping. Health Commissioner Bagby sends this interesting telegram:

"Results of child health demonstration of commonwealth fund during period of five years show number of deaths of white children under 15 per year for five years' demonstration period, lower by 50 per cent than in the four years before the demonstration."

This is a wasteful world, and ours is the most wasteful, extravagant nation on the earth. The worst of all waste is the waste of child life.

Public health officials in Washington say that one per cent of the population has influenza, a million cases throughout the United States. And "the peak of the epidemic has not been reached."

Get plenty of fresh air, eat moderately, drink plenty of fresh water, not iced, keep away from crowds and keep cheerful. That's about all the advice you can get.

When Henry Ford started his "Ford Motors, Ltd.", company to build Ford cars in Britain for all Europe, he little thought he was starting a new speculative bonfire in Wall street.

The sales of his stock Wednesday above 400,000 shares, constituted one-quarter of all the business done on the curb stock exchange.

The British, according to Ford's plan, were to own 40 per cent of his British company. They own little of it now, the Americans having bought it away from them, at a profit of more than 300 per cent, buying the stock for more than four times what Ford charged them for it.

To make things more interesting, Mr. Ford's Canadian company went up $72 a share.

Next time Ford will arrange it so that those to whom he benevolently sells stock for $5 a share won't be able to get rid of it for a year or two at least.

It was a cheerful day Wednesday in Wall street, for those that lend money. Interest on "call money" rose to 12 per cent, the highest in a year.

The "squeeze" in money, predicted for the year's end, seems to have arrived.

Henry Ford, who probably has never seen Wall street in his life, says, "There is nothing new under the sun. Motors, airplanes, radios are no more new than 'a dinosaur's egg'."

Mr. Ford thinks civilizations very ancient had flying machines, automobiles, etc. At least he is quoted to that effect.

He's mistaken. The flying machine existed in men's imagination, not elsewhere.

The first flying machine that ever flew on this earth was the Wright brothers'.

On other planets other "men" fly, undoubtedly.

They have flown on Mars, perhaps, for ten million years. But here it is new.

Mr. Durant has given his $25,000 prize to Major Chester P. Mills, formerly federal prohibition administrator in New York.

Mr. Mills suggests that the enforcement of prohibition be removed from "influence". It is a good suggestion, but hardly worth $25,000.

Put men in jail that buy from bootleggers and you will discourage bootlegging. But that would not suit the eminently respectable gentlemen that buy from the bootleggers.

Lura Frazer is dead, in Hannibal, Mo., aged 91.

That will interest many when they are told that Lura Frazer was the Lura Hawkins who used to play with Mark Twain 80 years ago.

She is the "Becky" of "Tom Sawyer".

President Coolidge settles for a short rest on Howard Coffin's place in the sunshine of the Georgia coast.

Herbert Hoover is hurrying back to Washington, omitting for the present his visit to Florida, to get ready for March 4.

Washington predicts that Dwight Morrow will be secretary of state. Mr. Morrow's success in Mexico would make that seem reasonable. But predicting for Mr. Hoover is dangerous.

The United States air mail has set a new record for speed, traveling from Dallas, Tex., to Chicago in six hours 42 minutes, a good deal of the time at the rate of three and one-half miles a minute. Thanks are due the post office for really developing American aviation.

It appears that the estate of the late Judge Gary, head of the steel trust, amounted to less than $13,000,000.

He could have made more money than that buying himself a little "steel common" back in the war days when he told this writer: "Buy steel. It will soon declare a dividend."

This writer gave the good advice to Albert Lasker, afterward head of the shipping board, who bought steel. It climbed up from $50 to $135 without stopping to take a breath. Knowing all about it, Mr. Gary could easily have made fifty or a hundred million with a little "pyramiding". But he never gambled.

As to the small amount of steel stock that he left in his estate, the figures do not include what he gave, while he was still alive, to his grandchildren.

The "speakies" will fizzle, for the same reason that every presentable stranger seems more important while he keeps still.

Hints and Dints

Why not call Winter avenue "Christmas Tree Street" or maybe "Santa Claus Avenue"?

It costs the Canadians eight and one-half cents to make a bottle of whisky that is sold in this country for eight dollars a bottle and that is not a quart either. We read this in a newspaper and did not get the knowledge from experience. If we wanted whisky it would not be Canadian Scotch.

An executive is a man who thinks the lunch hour extends from 12 until 2:30.

We heard one chap telling another on Christmas day that the best libation he ever participated in was made of equal portions of gin and ice cream. The chap he told it to said he would try it the very first time he could get enough ice cream to make it. Oh rowdy-dow-dow!

It takes some birds quite a few days to get over the Christmas whoopee.

As much as forty dollars was asked and paid for a pair of seats to some of the Broadway shows in New York this week. This would not last very long if yokels from the plowed ground would stop paying such scandalous prices for shows. It would not be long until good seats could be had for two smackers if New Yorkers had to pay for them.

Science has yet been unable to find anything to combat the flu germs. There are people who go to bed when they get it and drink all the red drinking likker they can get hold of, good, bad and indifferent and that has been found to be about the best cure. Personally we would rather have the flu — if it was not to severe—than take a chance on some of the red eye stuff obtainable now by breaking the law.

A lady aviatrix, unmarried for some strange reason, says she will not die until her time comes. That is very true and it may come on one of her flights.

Correct this sentence: "Yeah, the kid is spoiled," said he, "but I don't blame its mother or grandparents."

The demand for Canadian beer has become so great that brewers are shipping it in tank cars, just like they do milk. That's nothing. In this country they haul, it in hearses, baby carriages and in fact most any kind of a vehicle that they think will fool the police. When it comes to shipping likker Canada has no strange conveyances on us.

A REAL CONTRIBUTION

Dear Mr. Hints and Dints Man—

I see by your paper that some poor dub writes about Hell Cat Wives. Well! He has my sympathy. For Mr. Hints and Dints Man, here's where a poor helpless woman has a devil-dog husband and if I could only find out who has the Hell-cat wife, perhaps we could arrange to make a trade, at least I would like to see them be matched for a round or two at the "Jolly Bowl." If she can fight like my devil-dog husband, the fur would surely fly, and it would do my heart good to see him given a trouncing by some Hell-cat wife, for believe me, he needs it.

The funds from such a bout, could go toward passing a law compelling Dog-devil husbands and Hell-cat wives to live together. Boy! Wouldn't that be great?

I don't care whether you print this in your paper or not, but if you ever find out who has the Hell-cat wife, let it be known through your column, and I'll tell you who I am, and you'll be surprised for you know me and have danced with me, too.

Yours for more peaceful homes.

We hear that an attempt is to be made at the coming session of the Pennsylvania Legislature to pass a law that will provide life imprisonment for those who get convicted of crime four times. We are more or less of a sport and we are willing to wager that no such law passes in this state. Not as long as Woodlawn and Philadelphia are in this state.

The one great outstanding trouble in this world of tears is that a very great majority of humans have absolutely no interest in anything or anybody except themselves. And we dare anyone to prove that statement to the contrary. Oh, wham de doodle wham!

There are just ordinary crazy birds cruising around in this world, then comes the violent insane in the insane asylums and then come the crazy damphools who drive automobiles. We have noticed that the worst offenders on the roads are the half baked yaps about 16 to 20 years old. The way they do fly. Th' crooks in the cans!

There are over a million and a half more automobiles registered in this country now than there were a year ago. Does this mean that that many people are richer or that they owe for their busses?

This column today is made up of things we read and read about over Christmas and some of the things are not so good that you read about.

Some anarchists in Germany, they call 'em Communists, have started a newspaper which conducts a violent propoganda against all religions. Those birds seem to be in favor of a heluva time. How would you like a gang of those babies living near you on the same street?

"He is honest, but he is slow pay" is the equivalent of saying: "He is truthful, but you must pry the truth out of him."

Well, the next generation won't inherit a taste for stuff that kills a man before he has time for progeny.

The dragons feared by our fathers weren't imaginary. They were the dinosaurs of 500,000 years ago, treasured in folk lore while the "educated" forgot.

Vanity attends us all, wherefore the hen cackles when she achieves an egg and man sings when he takes a bath.

THE LOOM OF THE HEART

By FRANKLYN BLANNING

When I am dead, I pray my garments shall not be those of these proud, sunlit days.
Suit of gold and cynical hat?—The suit will moldy be and the hat threadbare.
Moths, even now, consume the silks of vanity.
I shall be bare if I have not woven enduring fabrics within my heart,
Strong, shining cloth that will wear for the long journey into Eternity.
I would leave after me, scraps of heart-weavings as keepsakes for fond bosoms.
I must spin yarns of tears to be wiped away
And weave them with the hope that I can give to tired hearts:
My suit shall be tailored with thoughts of friends I have made,
And lined with love, the kind that is weatherproof.
My cap I would fashion with faith in fellowmen;
Shirt, necktie, socks and belt should harmonize with kindly words.
My shoes, firmly cobbled with leather of temptations overcome,
I shall lace with the latchets that bind a man to a trust.
The underwear, concealed, will be the good intentions that I never carried out.
When I am dead, the flaunting fabrics of self must not form the garments of my spirit.
Glittering are the wrappings of vanity, but Death will unwrap me.
Love, understanding and charity, from the loom of the heart, must cover me;
Otherwise, my soul shall be naked when I stand before the eyes of God.

Sentence Sermons

THERE IS NO TYRANNY—

Worse than the tyranny of fear.
More hopeless than the tyranny of the closed mind.
Like the tyranny of the crowd.
Equal to the tyranny of success.
More common than the tyrannies we make for ourselves.
Of mind more subtle than worry.

Wright Anniversary Triumph Arouses Pride Of Countrymen

Nation Graphically Reminded Of Its Delay In Appreciating Epochal Flight At Kitty Hawk Twenty-Five Years Ago

The recent triumphant celebration of the anniversary of the first successful airplane flight graphically reminded the nation that it has been slow in giving full recognition to the epochal achievement of the Wright brothers in the sand hills of Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, 25 years ago.

Although the Wrights' experiments were quietly conducted, with slight public attention, the RALEIGH NEWS AND OBSERVER recalls that "in a few days after the successful flight a quarter of a century ago, the world grasped the significance of the conquest of the air.  The Wrights went to Washington with their little craft," continues the North Carolina paper. "They flew at Fort Myer and the Congress adjourned to see the flight. They flew over the Capitol and the necks of lawmakers were craned to see the achievement. That was 25 years ago. The story of Byrd's flying to the North Pole, of Lindbergh's trip across the Atlantic and wonderful conquests by other distinguished aviators, as well as the girdling of the globe, tells the progress since that day, forever memorable, at Kitty Hawk."

"Man's ambition to conquer the skies was unrealized for centuries," says the SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN. "History and mythology tell us of men who watched birds soar into the sky, smoke rise up and fade away in the haze, and they longed to shake off the shackles of gravity and fly. It was because man was long chained to the ground that American capital was slow to back the challenge of the sky. It is only in the last five years that industry and capital have regarded the airplane with anything but skeptical eyes. Other pioneers who joined the ranks of the Wrights fought the obstacles of ground-born and ground-bound skeptics. And today we have huge passenger planes carrying capitalists, business or pleasure bent, industrialists and their commodities, mail and perishables—we have commercial airplanes making an average daily record of more than 45,000 miles."

Reviewing some of the stories told of the early experiences of the Wrights, when they selected a remote strip of the North Carolina coast, the SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN explains: "It is often overlooked that the development of the airplane was preceded by valuable, if dangerous experimentation with gliders, and that considerable knowledge about the construction and use of aircraft was obtained from those earlier machines. When the Wrights first went to Kitty Hawk in 1900, their primary object was to obtain experience in the air by means of gliding flights, and the bleak sand hills of Kitty Hawk were chosen because steady winds favorable to gliding were to be found there."

"A historic fifth of a minute" is described by the NEW YORK EVENING POST. "Orville Wright, lying on his stomach in the world's first airplane, flew for twelve seconds," says the Evening Post, "appropriately registered by a coast guardsman who, having witnessed the flight, ran toward the post office as fast as his legs and lungs would let him, shouting, 'They've done it! They've done it!'"

"Richer development, greater usefulness, more general ability lie ahead," declares the ST. PAUL PIONEER PRESS. "No one now knows nor can imagine the limits of achievements in the air. But whatever the future of flying may unfold, these triumphs of today and tomorrow trace back definitely to the pioneering work of the Wrights." The BELLINGHAM HERALD adds: "The silver anniversary of that epochal event finds aviation an established and accepted form of practical transportation, vying with the railroad, the motor bus and the steamship. More than that, it is conceded to be barely on the threshold of the development through which it is destined to pass."

"The last quarter of a century has been a period of phenomenal development along every line," observes the NASHVILLE BANNER, "and there is no telling how much of it is due to the inspiration given the minds of men by the solution of the problem of human flight as offered by the Wrights."

"One of the great milestones of civilization" is the CHARLOTTE OBSERVER'S estimate of the place of the first successful flight, and that paper believes that the monument to the Wrights is "no less a monument to those traits of character which have placed America at the head of the nations. The marker," continues the Observer, "serves but little purpose—to remind future generations of the place and time of the beginning of great things. The real monument to Wilbur and Orville Wright, and to the inventive genius which they exemplify, consists of the general acceptance and wide acclaim of man's conquest of the air."

"The small beginning," remarks the CHATTANOOGA TIMES, "has resulted in a development, powerful in war, useful in the pursuits of peace and adaptable to the ends of pleasure. And the end of the development of the flying machine is not yet. The next 25 years may bring improvements that will dwarf the progress of the last quarter of a century in aviation."

Quoting President Coolidge's assertion that through this new industry "the nations will be drawn more closely together in bonds of amity and understanding," the ST. LOUIS TIMES adds that "of itself, that prediction is inspiring to those who earnestly deprecate war and feel the sweet influence of the stars of peace."

Scientific recognition at last accorded to the Wrights gives satisfaction to the WATERBURY REPUBLICAN, while the COLUMBIA RECORD remarks that "it's a far cry from bleak sand dunes and public jeers in 1903 to fame's eternal camping ground in 1928, but Mr. Wright has made the grade." The TULSA WORLD believes that "it is altogether probable that had the Wright brothers been citizens of any other country they would have been given an ample government subsidy to carry on their experiments and perfect their marvellous invention, once they had demonstrated its feasibility."

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

JUST BOYS.

It recently took a railroad Vice President to show a Division Superintendent of one railroad what was causing so many hot boxes on his section of the line.

It was notorious that every train of cars that lay on a certain siding near the bend of a river gave trouble enroute after such a stop. No amount of investigation seemed productive of solution, and since every hot box costs an average of $25, these layovers were rather expensive. The difficulties were seasonal inasmuch as fine weather or cold weather produced many hot boxes.

The matter actually became a topic of conversation at a conference of executives. "Let's see that on the map," said the mystery buster, and after scanning the field, he announced:

"Well, I thought so. That particular bend in the river is the neighborhood where I was brought up, and as boys we used to swim and skate thereabouts. Oily waster from the boxes was ideal for starting our fires. I guess the new generation of boys in that section hasn't changed—and they don't know half the damage they're doing either!"

Men may come and men may go, but boys will be boys forever.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE HOME-PLACE

There's a little patch of ground where the tulips row by row
Are sleeping through the winter
'neath the coverlets of snow.
There's a spruce tree waiting for them in its coat of Koster blue,
And an elm tree standing sentry, as the soldiers often do.
And I'm sitting at a window where these lovely things I see,
Idly wondering about them and how came such joys to me.

There are countless busy people hurrying daily to and fro,
And they never dream that tulips may be planted, row by row,
And they never see the spruces and the elm tree standing there;
It may be they have lovely things to which they give their care.
It may be they've a patch of ground adorned with little trees
And haven't either time or thought to look at such as these.

Oh, here is all I care about in this old world of ours.
Here blossom in the summer-time my choice of all the flowers.
Upon this little patch of ground stands all I treasure most,
The loveliest of everything that grows from coast to coast.
Nor could I find so fair a spot, wherever I might roam,
As is that little patch of ground which symbolizes home.

So sitting at my window as the people hurry by
I fancy they have plots of earth their labors beautify.
I fancy they have trees they love and tulips in the spring
And beds of sweet forget-me-nots to which their memories cling.
And they are merely hastening home with eager eyes to see
The trees and things which mean as much to them, as mine to me.

Matson May Be Called To Face Federal Charges

Department Of Justice After Man Who Is Fugitive From Fresno, Cal.

E. H. Matson, former New Castle automobile salesman, who is now in the county jail awaiting trial on forgery charges, is wanted by the federal authorities, according to information received by Deputy Sheriff William Reynolds. Matson was recently brought here from the Indiana state penitentiary at Michigan City, from which institution he was paroled to Lawrence county. He had been serving time in Michigan City penitentiary for forgery.

After Matson had been brought here Deputy Sheriff Reynolds received a letter from C. H. Keep, of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, Pittsburgh, in which he says: "I am advised by our Chicago office that on December 8th, 1928 the Indiana State penitentiary at Michigan City, released to you a prisoner giving the name of Foster Wilmott, alias E. J. Watson, alias Wasson, who had been sentenced to that institution to serve from two to fourteen years.

Our Chicago office believes that this man is a fugitive for whom we are looking, using the names of H. M. Weaver, H. A. Watson, Lieutenant Commander L. J. Lindley, who has impersonated a government officer.

The letter contains a description and photographs, which Deputy Sheriff Reynolds says are those of E. H. Matson, and has so notified the Pittsburgh authorities.

According to the Pittsburgh office at Fresno, Cal., in November, 1924, under the name of H. M. Weaver, a man represented himself to be a lieutenant commander in the U. S. Navy, and through such representation secured something over $1000 in cash, on worthless checks. Weaver wore a U. S. navy uniform.

In October, 1924, at Brooklyn, N. Y., a person who represented himself to be Lieutenant Commander L. I. Lindley, believed to be the same individual as Weaver, secured $548 on bad checks. Later, at Jacksonville, Fla., he secured $500, by representing himself to be Lieutenant Commander Lindley.

He was indicted at Fresno, Cal., May 4th, 1925 for violation of section 32 and is now a fugitive. His description, which Deputy Sheriff Reynolds received along with the photographs is given as follows: Age, about 45; height, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches; weight, 160 to 170. Dark complexion, tanned; prominent Roman nose. Row of gold teeth in front; ears small and close to head; hair, thin, turning gray and bald in front. Smooth shaven.

Upon receiving information from Deputy Sheriff Reynolds that he believed Matson to be the man wanted, C. H. Keep, wrote again, saying that he had wired to Los Angeles, Cal., to forward a certified copy of the indictment and warrant, by air mail. Request is made that Matson be kept in custody until the arrival of the warrants. Matson will be held as he is to be tried here unless taken away by the federal authorities, should the identification be confirmed.

Matson, it is understood, has not yet been informed of the efforts that are now being made by the federal authorities to get him.

Enforcement Can Be Controlled By President-Pinchot

Former Pennsylvania Governor Says Prohibition Enforcement Up To President

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Only the President of the United States can enforce the eighteenth amendment, in the opinion of Gifford Pinchot, former governor of Pennsylvania, in a plan submitted in the $25,000 Durant prize competition.

The former governor predicts that Hoover will enforce the law.

Pinchot urges the President to conduct the federal enforcement service without regard to politics and to select a "co-ordinating enforcement officer" who will act as his personal representative and make it his business to see that all branches of the government try their best to curb liquor law violators.

British Distillers Take Out Insurance Against Prohibition

British Brewers And Distillers Fear That Prohibition May Invade England

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Leading British brewers and distillers are taking out insurance policies at Lloyds against the possibility of prohibition in this country, it was learned today.

"Dry forces" in Great Britain are trying to make an issue of prohibition in the general election next year.

Officials at Lloyds are mystified by this unexpected rush for an insurance which is the latest in the schedule of "freak policies."

At first the under writers were inclined to laugh at the idea, but now they are issuing policies for large sums at the rate of five shillings for every 100 pounds. These represent "odds" of 400 to one and, in the opinion of experts, are not very generous.

The majority of the insurers are men who have spent their lives in the brewing and distilling business.

Roof Fire Does But Small Damage

Fire, thought to have originated by flying sparks, did approximately $25 damage to the roof of the house owned by Ed. Norris of 9 Craig street shortly before two o'clock this afternoon.

The alarm was answered by companies No. 1, No. 2 and the Pirsch service truck from the central fire department. Both companies were back in service in a few minutes. This is the first fire that has occurred since Monday morning, Dec. 24.

EL CENTRO, Calif., Dec. 28.—A report that the giant albatross monoplane, piloted by Charles Rocheville and John Guglielmetti, ended its attempt to shatter the world's record for sustained flying in a forced landing in the desert north of Niland, was received by the Southern Pacific railroad here today.

The report was sent by the Southern Pacific train dispatches at Frink station. Details were lacking.

Surpassing any other official or unofficial billiard record feat of similar nature, Charles Peterson, above, maintained a run of 18.2 caroms for one hour and three minutes, under actual competitive conditions, at St. Louis recently. Unfortunately, for the sake of records, neither Peterson nor his partner kept score. Whether he ran 300 or 3,000 the feat must go unrecorded.

Liquor Raids At Mount Carmel Find Eighteen Arrested

Saloons And Speakeasies In Mount Carmel And Vicinity Are Raided

(International News Service)

MOUNT CARMEL, Pa., Dec. 28.—As the result of 25 raids made simultaneously on saloons and speakeasies in this city and vicinity by federal dry agents, 18 alleged violators of the prohibition laws today were out on bail.

The raids, which were totally unexpected in most cases, were said to have been a retaliatory measure following the mobbing of federal agents who attempted to stage several raids here about two months ago.

The wholesale round-up netted the agents five stills, having a capacity of 1,200 gallons each, a large quantity of whisky, moonshine, beer and wine. In several cases the federal men were assisted by state police.

Woman Hurrying To Husband, Compact Is Very Hard To Keep

Kentucky Woman Wedded Last February Vowed To Not See Hubby For Year, Fails

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Saying that her husband Gordon R. Kinsey, former attorney general of Kentucky, had made a wedding compact specifying they should remain separated for the first year of their marriage, a woman who said she was Mrs. Kinsey returned from France today declaring that she was unable to "stay out the year".

However, she fell only seven weeks short of the arrangement. They were married February 16, last, she said. Because Kinsey was not expecting her home until February, he was not here to meet her, the bride said, adding that she was hastening to their home in Louisville where she felt "certain of her welcome".

"I'm taking the first train," she said. "I won't wait for the year to end. I'll be so glad to see him that I'll even be willing to wash dishes."

POLICE GET INJURED MAN FROM HOSPITAL

Henry Pesona, who was wounded a few nights ago on the head during a fight at the home of Henry Miller on Pearl street, was released today from the Shenango Valley hospital. Upon his release he was taken by the police to police headquarters, where he posted a forfeit for his appearance at a hearing Saturday morning before the mayor. He is charged with disorderly conduct.

"It wouldn't do for your friend to lose his bag as well as his train," he remarked sweetly to the grumpy m. t. as the train glided out of the station. —Montreal Gazette.

He waited till the guard blew his whistle and then, as nobody appeared to claim the empty seat, he sprang in and flung the handbag out on to the platform.

Plan Next Semester's Classes At Euclid Avenue High School

Enrollment At George Washington To Be The Same Next Period

New schedules for classes during the second semester of school are being drawn up by attaches in the office at the George Washington Junior High school this week. Some changes must necessarily be made.

It is expected that the enrollment at the newest building in the city from February on will be practically the same as that of the present semester. A recent survey shows that almost the same number that leave the building to commence higher work in the Senior High school at the end of the first month will enter the building from various grade schools in the city.

There are 756 pupils attending classes at the school at the present time.

Woman Member Of Kidnap Gang Held On Serious Charge

(International News Service)

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 28. — Rita Doran, who is also known to police as Mrs. Willard Cole, was held in $10,000 bail Thursday for court, following a hearing on charges of assisting in the kidnaping of State Potrolman Russel Troup several weeks ago.

The girl, who admitted that she was a blonde but had dyed her hair black, was arrested in Montour, Iowa, and was brought here to face the court charges. Her two accomplices, Willard Cole and Edward Touhey are held in Cincinnati on charges of bank robbery.

The trio abducted Troup when he entered their machine one night on a highway near here after he had stopped them for a minor infraction on the motor code. He was overpowered and forced to accompany them to the outskirts of Baltimore.

The girl was also questioned by Baltimore detectives regarding the slaying of Thomas Revell in Baltimore on October 13, and several holdups in Baltimore and vicinity. She denied any knowledge of the other crimes.

PETER'S ADVENTURES in ANIMAL LAND

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

A BIRD IN THE HAND.

The sun came slanting through the trees and shone full in Peter's face, but he was too much interested in Carrier Pigeon's story to mind a little thing like a sunbeam, and he never moved. But he did take off his cap and used it as a fan as the Dove continued.

"I don't know whether you have ever been so scared that your heart popped right up into your throat," said he. "But when I found myself held fast in that giant hand that is just what my heart did.

"But when mother laughed at me it flopped back where it belonged. I knew she would never do that if anything terrible was going to happen. After mother talked to me I nearly burst with pride.

"I remembered that a while before she had told me that one day I should learn to be a messenger and father had said that I ought to make a mighty good one—in his younger days he had made a fine reputation for himself and so had his father before him.

"I made up my mind to beat both their records, if I could. (I knew that father would not mind — he would be only the prouder of me.)

"So I smiled at mother and settled down into the Two-Legs hand and Two-Legs stroked my back and called me a good fellow and promised me lots of fine things to eat. Then Two-Legs started out of the barn and I called good-bye to mother and she called good-bye to me and sister waved her wings and they both flew up on the roof to watch Two-Legs give me my first trial.

"So began my first day at school—for school it really was, with Two-Legs my teacher. And what fun it was learning my lessons.

HE GAVE ME ALL THE SEEDS I COULD EAT

"Maybe you will not believe it, but I grew to love my master almost as much as I did mother—he was so good to me.

"Even when I was stupid and flew in circles instead of going straight, and didn't get home on time, he never once scolded me, but said I would do better next time. And when I did—well, he was every bit as pleased as I was, and scratched my head and said, 'Atta boy,' and gave me all the seeds I could eat.

"Sometimes, as a special treat, my master caught grasshoppers while I was off on my fly and gave them to me for dessert."

SUCCESSFUL METHODS FOR COMBATTING FLU AND COLDS

Follow These Rules—Do Not Fool With a Cold—Use Tried Safe Methods

Look out for colds—even mild colds in the head and throat.

Don't let them get down into the chest and lungs.

Don't expose yourself to damp or wet weather.

Don't go out if you are feeling sick. Influenza, grippe, pneumonia or other serious sickness often come from colds.

THE DANGER

Cold, "Flu" and Pneumonia Germs multiply by the millions and attack the weak and the strong alike. Watch out for colds, they weaken your resistance. The greatest danger lies in that "simple cold." Kill that cold quickly.

It is of vast importance to clean out the entire intestinal tract, upper and lower bowels. Keep the kidneys well flushed and freshen and strengthen the blood.

Experience Has Taught.

The experience of the 1918 epidemic showed that one of the best and simplest treatments was to take a steaming hot cupful of Bulgarian Herb Tea.

Why take any chances, why not be prepared to fight off your cold or "flu."

The right thing to do now is to go to your druggist, get a box of Bulgarian Herb Tea. Kill off your cold. Take it steaming hot twice a week. It will heat up the chilled blood, increase the circulation and rid the bowels and intestines of poisons and germs. Every family will find Bulgarian Herb Tea (purely vegetable) a real blessing to have on hand in this time of need.

See your druggist at once. Your health—perhaps your very life—may depend upon taking this simple precaution.

Making Headway In Decorating Work At School Auditorium

Considerable progress has been made in the decorating work at the auditorium of the George Washington Junior High school, Euclid avenue, school officials report. Just when the work will be completed is not definitely known. It is known however that everything in the spacious auditorium will be in readiness for the dedication ceremonies that are scheduled to occur February 22, 1929.

On completion of the decorators' work in the auditorium other workmen will begin laying the rubberstone flooring and then install the seats. Almost 1100 seats will be installed.

Some people won't enjoy Heaven. There won't be anybody there poor enough or wicked enough to snub.

RHEUMATISM IS QUICKLY OUSTED BY NEW KONJOLA

Sufferer Had About Given Up Hope Of Ever Being Well Again —Lauds New Medicine.

What encouragement and hope are to be found in the endorsements that pour in, telling of the amazing results that follow the use of Konjola, the new medicine. The records of this super-remedy fairly bulge with the glad letters from those who have found in Konjola the one avenue of escape from pain and suffering that have defied and resisted every effort to find relief. Konjola is not sold on promises nor claims, but upon the record of its achievements. Konjola passed the experimental stage years ago. It is a medicine known for what it actually accomplishes, not what it claims to do. The best proof of the astonishing merits of this super-remedy is that it triumphs where all else has failed; it conquers the stubborn cases that have baffled every other medicine and treatment tried; it is victorious where disease has held sway so long that all hope of new health was gone.

Consider, as an example of Konjola's powers, the experience of Mr. Micke Meeky, 531 East Washington street, New Castle. He had his doubts about Konjola's ability to help him, because everything else he tried had failed. But today Mr. Meeky, an expert molder, is among Konjola's most enthusiastic friends.

"No wonder Konjola is known as the medicine with more than a million friends. I can understand this when I consider what this wonderful new medicine did for me. I had rheumatism for months and months, and what I suffered cannot be described. I had pains all over my body; it was hard to tell where I hurt the worst. The agony was particularly keen in my legs and arms, and this made my work a torture. I am a molder, and a molder with rheumatism is entirely out of luck. I took enough medicine to relieve a dozen cases of rheumatism, but I was not benefited a bit. Fact is, my pains grew worse day after day, and I was wondering what to do when a friend advised Konjola.

"It seemed like a joke to me to try another medicine, however fine the recommendation, but my friend urged me to take his advice. 'Try just two bottles,' he said, 'and then decide what to do.' So I started on the treatment. My friend certainly knew what she was talking about, for before I had finished the second bottle I was so much better that I knew that the finish of my rheumatism was not far distant. Six bottles—a treatment covering six weeks—banished every pain. I feel simply great, and my friend is as happy as I am that he can say to me 'I told you so'. If anyone has any doubts about Konjola, refer him to me. It will be a pleasure to put any sufferer on the right road to health."

Not an unusual case of speedy relief of a stubborn disease; Konjola's files fairly overflow with thousands of endorsements like this. Isn't it reasonable to believe that what Konjola did for Mr. Meeky it will do for you?

CORINTO RESENTS ANTI-U. S. POSTER

This poster, shown by Miss Marie Rush, at Los Angeles, is one of thousands thrown upon the dock at Corinto, Nicaragua, by a steamship passenger as his boat sailed for Guatemala, recently. It attacks the United States, the American Legion and General Pershing and makes a plea for the support of Sandino, Nicaraguan liberal leader. Following close upon the visit of Herbert Hoover, president-elect, the act of the propagandist aroused high feeling among the Nicaraguans present. The crowd was unable to reach the unidentified man on the moving ship and he left the boat at Guatemala.

Deserted Amid Christmas Joy!

They found 5-year-old Evelyn Broome, wistful little stray, wandering from toy window to toy window in brilliantly lighted downtown shopping district of Brooklyn, homeless and hungry, yet confident that Santa wouldn't overlook Her. The photo shows matron of Children's Society examining cruel marks of beating on child's back. It is charged Evelyn was abandoned when her father, a widower, became irregular in his payment of boarding fees.

Economist Sees Bright Future With Business On Conservative Basis

By BENJAMIN M. ANDERSON, JR., Ph. D.
Economist of the Chase National Bank
Written Exclusively for Central Press and The New Castle News

BENJAMIN M. ANDERSON

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. — The money market and the stock market have had the center of the stage in 1928. Business has performed very creditably, indeed, recovering from the reaction of 1927, and showing a volume which may exceed the high level reach in 1926.

But the movement of business has received comparatively little attention in view of the dramatic and spectacular developments in the money market and the securities market.

Excessive gold and easy money policies of the Federal Reserve banks led to an immense expansion of bank credit, which amounted between June 30, 1922, and April 11, 1928, to $13,544,000,000 in the deposits of the commercial banks of the country, and to $14,512,000,000 in their loans, discounts, and investments — an expansion more than twice as great as that which took place during the period of our participation in the World War.

Unneeded by commerce, this expanding bank credit went into real estate mortgage loans installment finance paper, and, above all, into investments in securities and collateral loans against securities. The movement was accentuated by the easy money policies of the autumn of 1927, and speculation, which had run high through much of the period following early 1922, became greatly intensified.

A radical change in the money situation manifested itself in 1928. Beginning in the autumn of 1927, gold began to leave the country in great volume, and by the late summer of 1928 about $500,000,000 net in gold had been withdrawn from bank reserves for export.

During the autumn of 1927, the Federal Reserve authorities offset the loss of gold by increasing Federal Reserve bank credit; but with the beginning of 1928, concerned about the growing speculation, they reversed this policy, curtailed the credits which they voluntarily granted through their open market operations in government securities, and raised their discount rates by successive stages from 3½ to 5 per cent.

The combination of stock market pressure on bank reserves led money rates at the Stock Exchange to rise very sharply, with a much more moderate rise in rates on commercial loans, and there was acute money market pressure during the summer.

In the beginning of the autumn, the Federal Reserve authorities relaxed their open market policy as regards the buying of acceptances, and, through purchases of acceptances, put out enough credit to assure commerce comfortable rates during the period of autumn expansion in commercial borrowing. The stock market, which had had a reaction in June, took full advantage of the slightly easier money to stage another great demonstration.

Toward the end of November, the federal reserve authorities, apparently feeling that they had met the seasonal commercial need, ceased to increase their holdings of acceptances, and money immediately tightened sharply again. Federal Reserve bank credit was, of course, available through rediscounts, but the commercial banks, already having borrowed a billion dollars from the Federal Reserve banks, were reluctant to increase their borrowings further for other than necessary purposes. The result was 10 and 12 per cent call money in the second week of December, with a sharp reaction in stock enthusiasm.

Business continues to pursue conservative policies, and the credit situation in business, and the credit situation in business is generally clean and sound, with volume of activity large.

The entertainment Monday evening was well attended, not only by our own people but from neighborig communities. Rev. and Mrs. Van Cleve were presented with a pair of woolen blankets.

The good roads meeting of the Mercer-Butler Pike association will be held in the dining hall of the Mercer Volunter Fire department Jan. 3. Senator Fay, Rev. Stevenson. Dr. Eisenberg and others will be present and help boost the movement to have the state take over and maintain the Slippery Rock-Mercer road.

Hoover Election Points To Prosperous New Year G. O. P. Treasurer Avers

By J. R. NUTT
National Treasurer of the Republican Party
(Written Exclusively for Central Press and New Castle News)

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 28.—A survey of the records of American presidents will show that the country has never had as chief executive a man whose experience and training for the office has been in the school of business on a national, not to say international scale.

On March 4 there will be inaugurated a man who has such experience. Superimposed upon this background Herbert Hoover has had eight years of active participation in the government at Washington. This joining of broad business and political experience, together with a comprehensive grasp and understanding of all the factors making for healthy and widely distributed prosperity, gives ample reason for the confidence Mr. Hoover's election has inspired in the business community. This is an age when the problems confronting the government are tied up closely with the economic and business problems of the people.

Of course, economic laws and the swings of business are not governed from the White House. But the country is assured that all economic activities making for the general welfare will have, when wanted and needed, the active co-operation of the agencies of government. Mr. Hoover's well-known interest in scientific research is another evidence of his vision.

Business itself is beginning the new year under favorable auspices. Many lines of trade and industry have closed a year of exceptional activity, and of greatly improved earnings. These latter have helped to take much of the sting out of the era of "profitless prosperity". With many important industries in a strong position, agricultural conditions more favorable, employment large, an administration that is helpful, and European stabilization a fact, I look for continued business prosperity in 1929.

GARDNER

E. O. Alexander of Pittsburgh, spent Christmas at Gardner with his wife and son Francis.

Little Billie Edgar Currie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Currie, of Wayne stop, was taken ill with pneumonia last Friday and died on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Locke, of Gardner, went to Youngstown, to the home of Mr. and Mrs. McCoy, last Sunday morning and remained until Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Rodgers of East New Castle ate Christmas dinner at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Rodgers, of Crawford avenue.

Miss Margaret McDonald of Butler spent Christmas at the home of her brother, Mr. and Mrs. James McDonald of the New Castle-Ellwood highway, the parents and their two sons Clifford and Chester have all had the flu.

The children of the Gardner Sunday school received a fine treat last Sunday. The school will meet as usual Sunday morning but on account of the sickness the mid-week prayer meeting, and the Sunday afternoon service, will be postponed until later.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Moore, and children of Gardner were guests at noon on Christmas at the home of Mrs. Moore's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler of the Butler road, and at six o'clock dinner at the home of Mrs. Moore's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson of Moravia stop.

Mrs. J. W. Fombelle and daughters Elizabeth and Lois of East New Castle went to Evans City on Christmas, accompanied by Stanley Davis. Paul Fombelle and Mrs. Fombelle were guests on Christmas at the home of the latter's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. James Herbert, of New Castle.

Miss Julia Harlan of Harlansburg came to Gardner with Raymond Bell, last week, and on Sunday went to Pittsburgh to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wallace. Mrs. Harlan, of Gardner went to the funeral of their nephew, Carl Harlan, last Saturday at Beaver Falls, a lad of 16 who was probably injured at a football game some days before his death.

The prevailing epidemic, is still finding new victims, at Gardner. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benson, are among the latest sufferers. Nearly the entire family has been ill and Mrs. Benson is still bedfast. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Beson, and Mr. and Mrs. John Benson came out on Christmas and today Mrs. John is ill. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips of Wilmington junction came to the Benson home on Christmas.

It was a delightful occasion for all.

Deacon S. G. Hazen, and Mrs. Hazen of Ellwood City, came to Gardner last Friday, bringing a gift of five dollars from The Woman's Mission circle of the Providence Baptist church, for the fund for Gardner chapel. The circle also sent a fine piece of household linen, to the members of their former pastor's family who now live at Gardner. And the circle at the Baptist church at Harlansburg, also sent a box of Christmas cheer.

The Sunday school at the East New Castle mission, gave a very excellent program on Christmas night. The Superintendent, W. E. Ferry, and the teachers of the school, planned an entertainment of genuine merit. Every one entered into the spirit of the occasion with great zest. There were songs, recitations, and playlets by the children which showed careful drilling. The ladies of the school presented a pageant of great beauty and loveliness. Santa Claus came in at the window and caused much fun and laughter by his witty remarks and lively repartee.

Scientists have found skeletons with a third eye in the top of the head, which indicates that Nature foresaw the airplane and tried to avert stiff neck.

THE NEWS BY MAIL, ONE YEAR, $5.00

U. S. Business In 1929 To March On And Upward

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Long range business forecasts are about as safe as weather predictions—yet if ever there closed as year that held out glowing promises for prosperity for the next, it is 1928.

If all the barometers, thermometers and altimeters of commerce that are kept in the currents of trade and manufacturing in Washington reflect rightly the situation, 1929 for the great mass of American people should be one of steady and certain march forward and upward, along a plateau of living that in 1913 seemed inconceivable.

America is prosperous, and according to the signs will remain prosperous, largely because of the tremendous production and sale of luxuries and semi-luxuries.

Since the war the agricultural, bituminous coal and textile industries admittedly have been out of line with developments in other phases of commerce.

To Aid Farming

There are real signs of improvement in these laggard industries. President-elect Hoover has pledged himself to arrange a surgical operation on agriculture which will bring to the millions on the farm some measure of the benefits of prosperity which has been enjoyed by the average urban dweller. The other industries through scientific and waste eliminating methods probably will recover.

At the present time the speculative activities of the stock-market are causing the government grave concern.

Secretary Mellon recently admitted to congress that the remedial attempts of the reserve system owing to activities of powerful groups of speculators and the belief of the public that stock prices were on a perpetually rising plane, had been futile.

Nevertheless best informed government experts do not believe that the speculative activities will have any important effect on productive business in 1929. A general crash in the market that would wipe out the savings of the thousands of scattered and amateur speculators the country over, might be serious. But no crash of far-reaching consequences is anticipated.

Outlet Abroad

The country has credit resources that run into the hundreds of billions. Between four and five billion dollars normally are in circulation. There is an outlet abroad for about five billion dollars worth of excess production annually. There is no productive business inflation. As 1928 closed stocks of commodities were not excessive. The banking situation is secure with failures this year sixty per cent less than last. Less than 3,000,000 individuals out of the country's 120,000,000 are required to pay direct federal tax. There was $28,000,000,000 in savings accounts and more than $70,000,000,000 new investments in foreign and domestic enterprise during the year. There is also the item of $18,500,000 in new life insurance. Money for commercial purposes is plentiful at fairly reasonable rates.

Both Secretary Mellon and Secretary of Commerce Whitting have predicted a continuance of "good times" next year.

Four Developments

So far as 1928 is concerned there were four outstanding developments. Of first importance was the net export of nearly $500,000,000 in gold. There was the stock market situation which resulted in a boost of brokers loans to more than $6,500,000,000. Financing of new construction and enterprise went into record figures. Business generally overcame a sudden slump which marked last November and December and the first of the year started a forward movement which in many respects has established records exceeding those even of 1926, generally held to have been the most remarkable industrial and commercial year in the peacetime history of the United States.

Foreign Securities

It now appears that the volume of foreign securities publicly floated in the United States this year will be about $1,500,000,000 including new and refunding operations. New loans probably will run $1,250,000,000, slightly less than last year, while the gross loans may be somewhat larger.

Dividend and interest payments for 1928 probably exceeded 1927 by five per cent with an estimated total of over $5,000,000,000.

There was another tax reduction in 1928, with substantially $200,000,000 knocked off of what the country must pay the federal government annually. The reduction in the corporation tax, the benefits of which will not be reflected until 1929, was the greatest consequence, and no doubt will prove a stimulant to business.

Government finances are secure. While there has been much talk of a deficit for the year ending June 30, 1919, owing to the $105,000,000 refund of taxes illegally collected, there is little probability of an excess of expenditures over receipts.

HERE'S DRY NEW YEAR INSURANCE

Horse-Drawn Hearse Takes Her To Grave

ROCK MOUNT N. C., Dec. 28.—Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah Denson of Red Oaks who died at her home lately at the age of 93 years was held from her home.

During the past year Mrs. Denson had read the Bible through 14 times having made the book her constant companion in her long period of confinement. She had never ridden in a motor drawn vehicle and one of her last requests was that she be taken to the grave in a horse drawn vehicle. The procession which wound slowly from her home was headed by a stately black hearse drawn by horses a suggestion of another age.

Salary Act Helps Government Aids

New Welch Act Finds Favor With Rear Admiral E. H. Campbell

International News Service Staff

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — The Welch act, passed at the last session of congress, designed to reclassify Uncle Sam's vast army of employes and increase their pay, has achieved its purpose in at least one bureau of the government.

In the annual report of the judge advocate of the navy, Rear Admiral E. H. Campbell, is found the official first word commendation of the working out of the Welch act, yet written.

The Welch act, Campbell said, "was especially favorable in its application to employes in the professional grades and thereby greatly benefited this office in that it permitted of substantial increases in the compensation of attorneys. In consequence it is anticipated that the office will be exposed to a lesser extent in the future than has been the case in the past to losses of experienced attorneys by greater opportunities being offered in other fields.

"While the operation of the Welch act proved disappointing to many employes in the clerical grades who received only small increases in pay, its effect on the whole has been decidedly beneficial so far as applies to this office."

Nearly 112,000 Deaths In State During Year

(Special To The News)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 28.—Last year a total of 111,252 deaths occurred in Pennsylvania, a mortality rate of 11.4 deaths per 1,000 population, according to the U. S. commerce department figures, as included in a survey made public today. Thirty-one other states of the registration area have death rates lower than that of the Keystone State, although the Pennsylvania rate is identical with the mortality rate for the registration area as a whole.

Mortality in Pennsylvania declined in 1927 as compared with 1926, the total number of deaths dropping from 120,537 in 1926 to 111,252 last year, and the mortality rate showing a corresponding decrease from 12.5 to 11.4 for the same years.

Pennsylvania had more deaths than any other state in the Union last year with the exception of New York where 140,899 persons died.

Of the total number of deaths reported in the State last year, 1,345 were deaths of mothers caused by childbirth. These figures reveal an increase over such deaths in 1926 totaling 1,324 in number.

Rhineland Boasts Numerous Saloons

Wipperfurth Has One Licensed Inn For Every 100 Inhabitants; Bonn Second

(International News Service)

COLOGNE, Dec. 28.—Kipling has sung of the man who wanted to be "set somewhere east of Suez—where a man can raise a thirst."

Obviously he did not know the Rhineland. The latest census discloses that the cities and villages in this part of Germany can boast of the greatest relative number of opportunities for doing justice to the Rhenish wines.

The championship goes to the small city of Wipperfurth, which has one licensed inn for every 100 inhabitants. Then come Bonn, with one to 160, Coblenz with one to 161, and Mainz with one to 217 inhabitants.

Berlin lags far in the rear, with only one licensed establishment per 300 inhabitants.

CARS COME TOGETHER AT STREET CORNER

J. S. Hockenberry of West Sunbury, Pa., reported to the police Thursday that he was enroute west on Washington street and had made the stop at Mercer street, to wait on the green light, when a car driven by a woman and bearing Pennsylvania license 506-255, hit and damagged his machine.

Twice An Air Widow Girl Carries On Plan

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The New Castle News

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 28.—Eight years ago a Troy, O., girl neglected her housework long enough to make the upholstering for the three airplanes her husband's company built that year.

She even cooked for the hungry mechanics who fashioned steel and linen cloth into fleet planes. A year-old son claimed the remainder of her time.

Today, Mrs. Hattie Meyer Junkin, twice a widow of noted aviators at the age of 29, resides in Toledo to keep away from the city where she experienced so much tragedy, but she remains a member of the board of directors of one of the largest airplane plants in the world.

MRS. HATTIE MEYER JUNKIN.

But She Doesn't Fly

From the modest factory Mrs. Junkin helped start after the close of the World war it has grown into one which will make more than 1,000 planes during 1929. The young widow is said to be one of the few women in the United States actively connected with an airplane factory. Still she has never learned to be a pilot.

She has seen the aeronautical industry grow to its present position in the world and it is difficult to name a notable pilot she does not know personally. At the recent Chicago aeronautical show Mrs. Junkin was elected a member of the "Early Birds," an organization composed of those few persons interested in aviation since 1912. Only one other woman belong, Marjorie Stinson, a sister of the noted Eddie Stinson and Katherine Stinson, the first woman to fly.

William P. MacCracken, Jr., now assistant secretary of commerce in charge of aviation, was one of the pupils of her first husband, the late George E. "Buck" Weaver, while he was one of the 27 civilian instructors at Waco, Texas, in the war days of 1917.

Began Building Planes

After the war was over, the Weavers and their young son landed in Troy with little money but a lot of enthusiasm over aviation. They started the factory only a short distance from Dayton, the home of the Wright brothers.

Another young pilot, E. J. Junkin who became the present Mrs. Junkin's second husband in 1925 helped build the first three planes. The second year they sold five and then in 1924 they built and sold 50 and the days of struggles were over. Junkin died in 1926.

Mrs. Junkin has been interested in aviation ever since she was a small girl. Her parents read to her newspaper accounts about the flights made by the Wright brothers, Orville and Wilbur, back in 1903, but she little dreamed that some day she would be a friend of the surviving brother.

At the age of nine Mrs. Junkin competed with the boys in her home city of Glen Ridge, N. J., in building airplane models and gliders. One of her gliders broke the then existing world record by flying 225 feet. That year a New York newspaper staged a contest to determine the champion glider maker of the United States, but the 9-year-old girl could not enter since no provision had been made for girls entering the competition.

Baby Boy Is Born In Taxi

Bouncing Baby Boy Becomes Reality In San Francisco; Motor Escort

(International News Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28.—At last the original "bouncing baby boy" has made himself known—he was born in a taxi-cab.

Two San Francisco traffic officers noticed a cab in a wild dash through town. They gave chase. In the cab was Mrs. Christine Dennis, being rushed to a local hospital. While the officers were questioning Dennis and the taxi driver on the points of traffic laws, Dennis, Jr., made his debut.

The officers on their motorcycles, sirens shrieking, immediately formed an advance guard and rushed the Dennis family through the traffic to the hospital where all passengers are "doing nicely."

Judge Hildebrand To Give Decision In Butler Case

Controversy Over Payment Of Contractor For School House

BUTLER, Pa., Dec. 28.—Whether or not C. C. Miller will receive payment for work done on the proposed new high school at Hilliards depends on the decision of Judge R. L. Hildebrand of New Castle, who heard exceptions to the decision of the late Judge John R. Henninger, who ruled that the directors of Washington township cease work on the building.

Exceptions to the ruling of Judge Henninger were to have been heard in September, but the judge was taken ill, death resulting on October 24. As Judge James M. Galbreath had been interested in the case as an attorney, Judge Hildebrand heard the arguments of attorneys.

After the directors of Washington township had awarded the contract to Miller, residents of other parts of the township entered an action to stop work on the building, claiming that the high school should remain in North Washington. They won the decision from Judge Henninger.

In justification of their action in changing the location, the directors say that the building in North Washington is 100 years old and is unfitted for high school purposes longer, and that the present building does not give service to the larger number of resident pupils.

Practically every resident of the township has taken sides in the controversy and much feeling is said to have been aroused.

Harvard And Yale To Have Flying Clubs To Seek Air Supremacy

(International News Service)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 28.—Harvard and Yale, historical rivals of the gridiron, are to have a new battle ground, the atmosphere.

The flying clubs of both colleges will meet in a contest to test the aeronautical knowledge for supremacy of the air. Harvard will try to add to its recent pigskin victory by remaining in the air the greater number of hours. Negotiations are already being completed to have the contest staged at a local airport in the near future.

Nickolaus I. Englehardt, Jr., president of the Yale Flying club announced the endurance competition will replace the intercollegiate air race which was discontinued some time ago. Since flying has attracted interest among many college students it is hoped that these flight competitions will promote interest among the students.

Narcotic Agent Called By Death

New York Narcotic Agent Injured Handling Trunk Dies In Hospital

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—James G. Kennigan, narcotic agent who was active in the recent Rothstein dope ring expose, died in a hospital here Thursday following an operation.

Kerrigan's death gave rise to rumors that he had been poisoned by members of the narcotic band following the conviction of Joseph Unger as a ring leader.

However, federal authorities scouted the reports and explained that the agent died as the result of an operation made necessary by injuries suffered in moving heavy trunks seized in a narcotic raid.

French President Losses Heavily By Low Exchange Rate

(International News Service)

PARIS, Dec. 28.—President Gaston Doumerge is probably the only executive in the world who receives less than his predecessors, although his salary exceeds theirs.

This can be figured out at the current rate of exchange, the cost of living in France and heavy taxation.

Before the war the President received 1,200,000 francs, or $240,000. M. Doumergue's pay check is for 2,000,000 francs, or $80,000 at the exchange rate. It is considered also that the price index is about five times more than in 1914.

Out of the annual stipend comes 300,000 francs, or $12,000 in taxes. Here are some of the reasons for a drain on the presidential purse:

Lackeys, valets, cooks, chauffeurs, automobiles, gasoline, little remembrances to the military staff, the usual charities and visits from foreign rulers.

M. Doumergue, it is said, has no desire to receive more money from the republic because he prefers to set an example for national economy. He adheres, nevertheless, to all dictates of the protocol and maintains the traditions of excellence in French cooking and receptions partly by dipping into his personal fortune.

And the President continues to smile and the people continue to call him "Gastounet".

Le Bourget Field No Longer Center For Military Flying

(International News Service)

LE BOURGET Dec. 28.—Housecleaning for a greater 1929 season, this flying field has dispossessed military aviation and will henceforth be reserved entirely for commercial aircraft.

The 34th Aviation regiment in which Col. Lindbergh is an honorary sergeant has up to now occupied half of the field. It has been moved to Etampes. The military hangars have been taken over by commercial companies and seven new hangars are being built. When these are ready Le Bourget wil boast 27 modern up to date nests for flying machines.

Le Bourget will continue to be the starting point of Transatlantic flight attempts. Next year aspirants for ocean honors include Second Lieutenant Robin of the 34th regiment. Using a mammoth Bernard capable of making 140 p. h. with a full load Lieut. Robin is laying plans for a takeoff in April or as soon thereafter as weather conditions permit.

Tight Hats May Make Women Bald

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—"Women's tight hats may lead to their becoming bald," says Dr. King Brown, Medical Officer of Bermondsey.

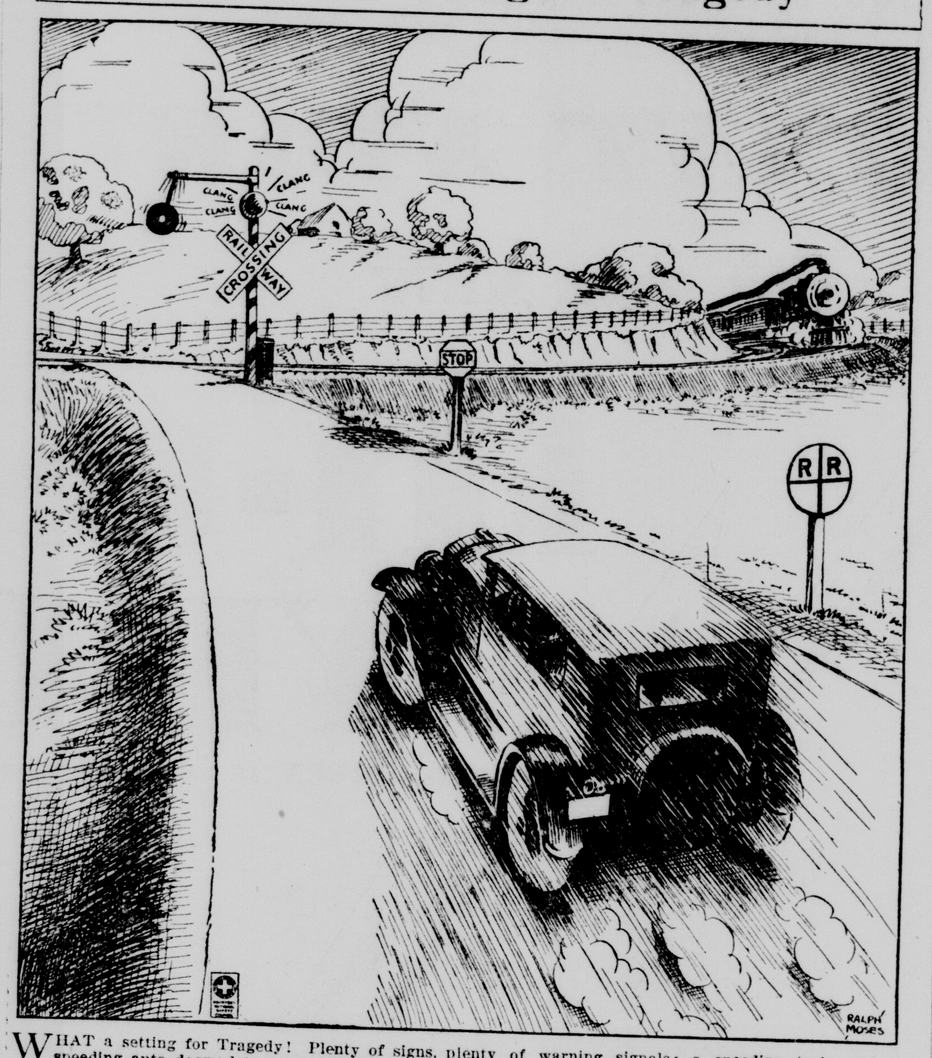
"I think if women go on as they are they will be in time in just the same position as the men today," he added. "But women will be progressing in intelligence as they lose their hair, so there is some advantage to be gained. Meantime they had better go hatless."

University Denies Rockefeller Deal

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Reports that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had purchased almost three blocks of real estate for $100,000,000 brought a denial here this afternoon from Columbia University, owner of the property.

The Ideal Setting for Tragedy



WHAT a setting for Tragedy! Plenty of signs, plenty of warning signals; a speeding train and a speeding auto doomed to meet—with the inevitable result. You probably find it hard to believe that any driver would fail to slow down, look and listen, upon approaching a grade crossing. National Safety Council statistics prove otherwise. Every month of the year there are many such tragedies. As a rule the innocent suffer with the guilty and often whole families are hurled into eternity.

This writer saw one of these grade crossing tragedies some months ago when the train he was riding came to a jerky stop beside the wreck. He never wants to see another. Since that day he has made it an inviolate rule to follow that sound advice: "Cross Crossings Cautiously."

American Drugs To Be Used To Combat Illness Of King

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Special drugs for the treatment of King George are believed to have been brought here from the United States, it was learned late this afternoon. The Evening News stated that C. E. Flynn, one of the king's home service messengers, met the White Star Liner Olympic at Southampton and received from the purser a small package from America. It was understood that the package contained special drugs for use in combating the king's illness.

Archie Compston Is Now Professional

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Archibald Compston, the well-known English professional golfer who has gained an international reputation as a free-lance, has at last listened to the blankishments of club secretaries who would have him as their club professional.

He has accepted a position as professional at the Coombe Hill course, on the outskirts of London, taking the place of Arthur Havers, who is now touring the Argentine.

Coombe Hill is considered to be one of the "plums" among the London clubs, and it was probably this season that persuaded Compston to give up his long period of free-lancing.

Compston recently returned from the United States, where he toured with Walter Hagen. In May of this year he overwhelmingly defeated Hagen in a match at Moor Park, but was in turn overwhelmingly beaten by Hagen in a later match.

Afghan Rebels Now In Flight

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Afghan rebels who tried to seize Kabul were decisively defeated north of the city by King Amanullah's loyal forces and are now in flight, that Afghan Legation was advised this afternoon. Kabul was described as normal. Portions of the rebel army are being encircled and driven into the mountain wilderness.

The Afghan Legation that King Amanullah intends to abdicate or that the government has any intention of expelling foreign legations or withdrawing Afghan Legations from abroad.

Americans Build Nitrogen Plant For Soviet Govt.

(International News Service)

MOSCOW, Dec. 28—The first nitrogen fixation plant in Russia for the manufacture of fertilizers and explosives is to be constructed under the supervision of American engineers. Lewis P. Jones of the Nitrogen Engineering corporation of New York has signed a contract for drafting plans and directing the installation and operation of machinery.

The plant will cost slightly more than $1,000,000 on the most modern American lines. Considerable portion of the machinery will be bought in the United States.

Used in conjunction with enormous deposits of potash which the Soviet government has been developing rapidly, the nitrogen fixation plan will stop up one of the greatest gaps in Russia5s military defense. Soon after the beginning of the war the Czar's army ran short of ammunition. The production in the country fell far short of the needs of an army of millions, and the Allies had to resort to the slow and costly process of shipping in gunpowder to keep Russia in the war as an active combatant.

New War Horrors Pictured In Talk To League Union

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The horrors appertaining to another world war have been vividly pointed out by Field Marshal Sir William Robertson in an address to the League of Nations Union.

"Should another great war occur," said the Field Marshal, "we know that the loss of life and waste of wealth will exceed by many times the experiences of 1914-1918, while the horrors which may be suffered by the civil population from air attacks, combined with the use of new chemical substances would seem almost limitless.

"The world will never know what it had to pay for the last war. Taking the belligerents into account, the direct money outlay seemed to have been nearly $200,000,000,000, while the indirect cost of such items as destruction of property and so forth may be put at not less than $150,000,000,000 or some $350,000,000,000 in all.

"The loss of life was about 10,000,000 which was double that caused by all the wars of the preceding 120 years put together, and there were probably not less than 20,000,000 wounded."

Altoona Woman Is Seriously Injured When Machine Skids

Caucasus Tribes Join With Soviets

(International News Service)

TIFLIS, Georgia, Dec. 28.—The hoary mountain tribesmen of the Caucasus who have been fighting each other with primitive spears, battle axes and cutlasses for centuries because they had nothing else to do, are swarming into the Red army with great gusto. The volunteer quota for Daghestan and other mountain republics was exceeded by more than 100 per cent. The chairman of the Daghestan executive committee begged Moscow authorities to extend the quota so that only a few warriors would be disappointed.

Until the revolution the tribes had been held in subjugation. The Soviets opened enlistments to them for the first time this month.

New York Short 500,000 People

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—This city, according to department of health estimates, has suffered an approximate loss of 500,000 population through the decline of the birth rate in twenty years. The decline in the birth rate is reported to be general over the United States.

It is not because there has been a decrease in marriages that births have fallen off. In New York City since 1908 there has been a steady increase in the number of marriages. Fewer babies per family has slowed the population growth.

Sixty Million New Shares Of Stock Are Given Stockholders

Twenty-Five Well-Known Corporations Divide Big Melons To Stockholders

General Motors Ready To Effect New 2 1-2 For 1 Share In January, Report

By W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Financial Editor
Copyright, 1928, International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Stockholders in American industrial corporations have received 60,000,000 shares of new stock as the result of stock split-ups and stock dividends by twenty-five well known corporations since the middle of the year.

The advantage of the stock dividend is two-fold. First, it provided the corporations with a fair and equitable method of distributing a part of its accumulated surplus to its stockholders, who are in reality the owners of the business; second it helps to distribute stock in the market by reducing the price per share on stocks which otherwise would be beyond the ordinary purse.

Investors Favored

American industrial corporation heads are extremely anxious to affect as wide a distribution as possible of their stocks and bonds to the investor. In every case they are anxious to win and hold the investor who buys stocks "for keeps" rather than the margin trader who is concerned only with the snatching of a profit in the speculative markets. Apart from the enormous advertising derived from a liberal stock dividend or broad split-up of shares, the corporations are able to add enormously to their stock-holding "families" as the price of the stock unit has been reduced.

Though not in every case has the distribution of new shares been completed, official action making possible the distributing of stock has been taken and only the carrying out of the details remains to be done. A list of a dozen of the most prominent corporations operating in stock split-up channels is attached herewith.

General Motors, from 17,400,000 to 43,500,000 shares.

Du Pont De Nemours, from 2,810,000 to 9,838,375 shares.

Reynolds Tobacco, from 4,000,000 to 10,000,000 shares.

Tobacco Products, from 1,107,423 to 5,537,100 shares.

International Harv., from 1,080,000 to 4,322,716 shares.

Prairie Pipe Line, from 810,000 to 4,050,000 shares.

S. O. Kentucky, from 648,120 to 1,629,940 shares.

Atlantic Refining, from 500,000 to 2,000,000 shares.

Coty, Inc., from 327,726 to 1,311,043 shares.

Royal Baking Powder, from 100,000 to 800,000 shares.

Blaw-Nox Co., from 266,205 to 798,165 shares.

Famous Split-Ups

Some of the most famous split-ups prior to this year are the 32-for-1 recapitalization of the Vacuum Oil Company; the 6-for-1 distribution of American stock; the 7-for-1 of the National Biscuit Company and the vast increase of outstanding shares through the stock-dividend method, of the Standard Oil companies of New York and New Jersey.

When the General Motors Corporation completes its new 2½-for-1 split-up in January, it will have the enormous total of 43,500,000 shares outstanding, this will compare with 24,400,000 shares for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; 17,000,000 for the Standard Oil Company of New York and 7,116,000 shares for the United States Steel Corporation.

It was not until the latter part of 1924 that the most ambitious plan for the expansion of General Motors service and investment were put into effect. In that year there was a total of 5,800,000 shares outstanding, the number having been augmented by a 100 per cent dividend, followed by a 50 per cent dividend.

King Improves After Relapse

Doctors Issue Bulletin After Consultation; Uneasiness Over Relapse

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—King George's condition shows improvement said an official medical bulletin issued at Buckingham Palace at noon today.

The text of the bulletin follows:

"The king had a fair night with quieter sleep towards morning. There is less difficulty with taking nourishment and the general state improved during the past 12 hours.

"At the consultation this morning the progress of the past week was reviewed. During that period there had been definite improvement in local conditions.

"On the other hand the general condition as evidenced by weight and strength, does not show the same progress. Measures best adapted for meeting this difficulty were considered and determined."

The bulletin was issued after a consultation by Sir Stanley Hewett, Lord Dawson of Penn, Sir Humphrey Rolleston, Sir Hugh Rigby and Sir E. Farquhar Buzzard.

The uneasiness resulting from the relapse late Thursday was lifted somewhat by the announcement of the royal doctors.

Chemist's Helper Victim Of Feud Is Belief Of Police

Guggenheim Laboratory Worker Found Poisoned, Believe Enemies Responsible

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Henry G. Gaw, 29-year-old chemist's helper, found poisoned yesterday morning in the metallurgical research laboratory of the Guggenheim Bros., here may have been the victim of a feud begun on the floor of the ocean. Police learned that Gaw and James Baker 22, former laboratory helper for whom they are searching, both served on a navy submarine.

The peculiar character of Gaw's death which preceded by three hours the assault and robbery of two Baltimore truckmen at the plant led the police to advance several other theories. They believed the theft of a few dollars from the person of one of the truckmen was merely a "blind" to cover up the real motive. The poisoner probably was actuated by revenge or a desire to gain possession of some secret chemical formula, they said.

The victim's gums and lips were blistered from cyanide that evidently had ben forced down his throat after being mixed in a cup of coffee standing on a table nearby.

Despite denials by the owners of the laboratory that they possessed any secret and valuable formula some of the detectives pointed out that the truckmen saw the suspect looting the laboratory files. The truckmen said that pictures of Baker resembled the man they saw.

Following a custom of the past few years, Slippery Rock has presented a gala appearance during the Christmas season. A large lighted tree on the college campus, another on the diamond, and strings of vari-colored lights strung across the streets in the business section inform the passerby that Slippery Rock has the real Christmas spirit.

A wedding dinner was served at the bride's home at noon and in the evening the bride and groom were honor guests at a dinner at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Ralph Connor, and family of Grove City. Guests at the evening dinner included Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Smith, Leroy Smith, Isiah Smith and daughter Mildred, and Mr. and Mrs. Graham and family. Campbell Sees Good Year Ahead

Youngstown Sheet And Tube Company Head Enthuses Over Outlook

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 28.—James A. Campbell, president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., sees satisfactory business for 1929. There is no question about good business for the steel industry in the first half of 1929, provided financial conditions continue stable, he advises.

"Automobile industry is looking forward for the best year in its history," says Campbell. "Sharp competition may develop, with a lowering of prices. This will benefit the public, increase buying and in opinion of leaders in the industry, advance foreign trade by 40 to 50 per cent.

"Capacity of the steel industry will not require enlargement. Much money will continue to be spent on improvements designed to reduce costs, but little will be spent for additional capacity except that demanded by local conditions.

"Youngstown Sheet & Tube will enjoy fair earnings next year. We have spent much money this year to lower costs and will derive benefit from these improvements early in 1929. We will spend more money in the same direction in 1929."

If the poor really get the 15 per cent that income tax payers claim to give, that may explain where the dead broke get their cars.

SEVENTH WARD NEWS

Queen Esthers Have Christmas Party Thursday Evening

Eighteen Present At Party; Other News Notes Of Seventh Ward

Members of the Junior Queen Esther society of the Mahoning Methodist church had their Christmas party Thursday evening at the home of Miss Helen Anderson of West Madison avenue. Eighteen were present. Mrs. Will Logan is counsellor of this society.

At 6:30 the guests had a tureen dinner. The dinner table was attractively decorated in the season's colors. Covers were laid for eighteen. Special guests were Mrs. F. F. Sittig, president of the Women's Home Missionary of the Mahoning M. E. church and Miss Berniece Schoolcraft of Bridgeport, Ohio, former deaconess at the Mahoning church. An elaborate menu was enjoyed.

Following the dinner Christmas gifts were exchanged and the evening was spent informally in music, games and chat.

Committee in charge of the arrangements for the party event was comprised of Mrs. Helen Anderson, Harriet Truby, Dorothy Johnston.

The next regular meeting of this society will be the first Friday evening of January, January 4.

LIBRARY REPORT.

The circulation of books at the Seventh Ward Free Public Library branch has fallen off considerably the past couple of weeks. The circulation had been about a thousand books a week, but the number is not so high at the present time.

There are several reasons for this. The Christmas season is of course a busy time, both for adults and children. School pupils are having a vacation from books, school books and fiction as the weather is mild and they seem to be playing out of doors. Many people are sick and some are away, so there are a number of reasons for the decrease in circulation of books at this branch. After the holidays when there is more time the average circulation will probably be back to normal.

G. I. A. LODGE

The grand international lodge to Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers had their lodge meeting Thursday afternoon in the City Hall building. There was a good attendance of members present. During the afternoon the routine lodge meeting was conducted. Plans were made for a card party to be held in January. Date for the party will be announced later.

At the next meeting of the lodge on January 10 the installation of the lodge officers, elected this month, will take place.

MABEL WILSON LODGE.

Mabel Wilson Lodge No. 567 to Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen had their regular lodge meeting on Thursday evening in the Daughters of American hall. A brief business meeting was conducted and affairs of the lodge were discussed.

This was the last meeting of this lodge in this hall. Beginning with the meetings of the lodge next month, the meetings will be held in the Knights of Malta hall. The next meeting will be January 10.

Find Woman's Arm Badly Burned Near Dump At Cementon

Allentown Officials Searching For Two Men Seen Leaving An Automobile

(International News Service)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Dec. 28.—Discovery of a woman's arm in a dump near Cementon started state police on the trail of what they fear may be another gruesome murder.

The arm apparently had been ripped from its socket. It was badly burned.

Authorities fear a woman was killed and dismembered, the murderer taking the various parts of the body to different points near here for disposal. It is believed an attempt was made to try and hide the crime by burning the various portions of the victim.

The arm was found by Ira Klotz and Mister Tollotto, two small boys, while at play near the dump.

A search has been started for two well-dressed men seen to stop and leave a sedan near the scene yesterday.

Must Stop Making River Dumping Place

Dr. W. L. Steen Issues Orders Against Practice Of River Bank Residents

Sanitary Officer L. S. Hoon acting under instructions from Dr. William L. Steen, city health officer, on Thursday ordered three persons residing in the former I. O. O. F. Building on Neshannock avenue and two persons residing in buildings, which are located on Water street between Mill and Washington streets, to appear before the mayor, on a charge of violating the sanitary regulations of the city and state by throwing rubbish, garbage and other stuff on the ice and into the water of the Neshannock creek.

All five persons summoned appeared before Mayor Gillespie. They were given instructions by the mayor to cease disposing of it in that manner, bescause of the fact that it makes a very unsightly looking place as well as being a menace to the health.

Small fines were then imposed by the mayor, after which he suspended sentence, pending the good behavior of the persons appearing before him.

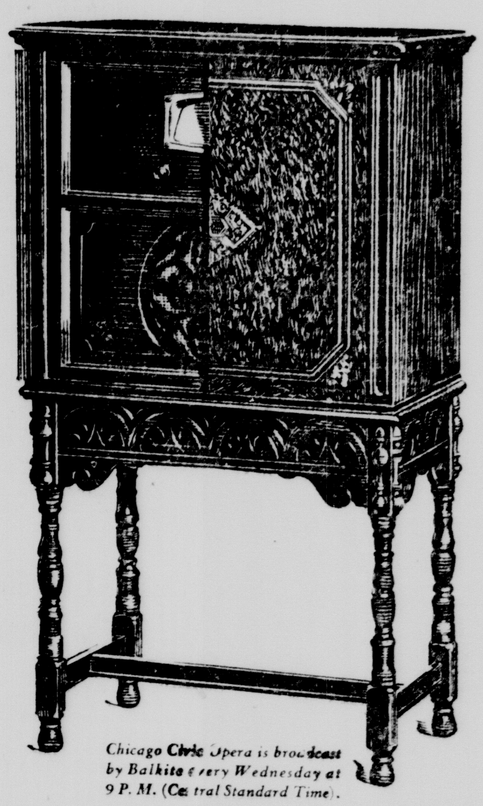
Balkite Radio $125 and up



Chicago Civic Opera is broadcast by Balkite every Wednesday at 9 P. M. (Central Standard Time).

The Biggest Value In Fine Radio

The marvelous all-electric 8-tube Balkite AC receiver, utilizing the new 227 tube; in a magnificent cabinet by Berkey & Gay, with built-in dynamic speaker for .. $255 less tubes

Features of the New Balkite Radios

No other radio receivers are sold with factory guarantee certificates offering free repair or replacement of parts, WITHOUT TIME LIMIT, should anything EVER go wrong with the receiver, with ordinary usage. The Fansteel Products Co., the manufacturers of the Balkite receiver, back this guarantee with their $2,000,000.00 of resources.

In no other receiver can the various parts be replaced in a few minutes time right in the home and using only a pair of pincers. This means the receiver can be used again within a few hours of the time trouble is reported to a Balkite dealer.

Two years of research and development were spent on the power supply of this receiver and a special mineral condenser was patented which is trouble-proof and cannot break down. The transformers are also greatly over-size and are wound with extra heavy wire. There is 80% less wiring in the receiver than is found in other 8 tube sets. The chassis is virtually all steel and aluminum and brass. These feasures prevent trouble and make possible such a sweeping guarantee.

Around this perfect power supply eight of the best radio engineers in the country were hired to design a receiver using the type No. 227 alternating current tube throughout. This is the only steady, humless AC tube. They incorporated "push-pull" audio amplification—the most distortionless and powerful form known. They used not only the patents of the RCA but also the Neutrodyne and the LaTour patents, equally valuable. They provided a phonograph switch for use in playing the new electrically recorded records with astounding realism. They also built into the receiver an output for furnishing the field current for dynamic speakers, reducing their cost $15 and improving their tone.

These features, together with the finest dynamic speaker made, give the Balkite a sharp, clear, clean-cut reproduction of speech and a tone range down to the lowest notes of the organ, without any of that hollow, barrel-like tone and blurred speech found in so many receivers.

As Balkite receivers are serviced at all times free of charge and within 24 hours of the report of any trouble, the purchaser of a Balkite Radio should have uninterrupted radio enjoyment for years with no expense but the replacement of worn-out tubes. There is no waiting without radio service while your receiver is sent to a factory. It is fixed at once on the spot in your home by slipping a new chassis part into the case or console.

Tuberculosis Is Termed As Menace

Scientist Tells Convention That Tuberculosis Is Making Big Inroads

Successful Wiping Out Of Disease Would Increase Span Of Life Two Years

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Scientists assembled here at "the greatest scientific congress ever held in this country" were told today by Dr. Harold D. Larsen of the University of Wisconsin that tuberculosis causes more than 129,000 deaths every year in the United States and that if the disease could be wiped out the average length of life would be increased about two years.

That is the life expectancy of the average person would be raised from 55 to 57 years.

Dr. Larsen was one of scores of speakers at various meetings being held simultaneously at the 86th convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. About 5,000 learned men and women are attending the sessions which will continue until January 2. Among those present are the country's foremost authorities on medicine, psychology, geology, geography, physics, sociology, education, engineering, agriculture, zoology, botany and other branches of science.

Lives destroyed annually by tuberculosis represent a tremendous economic loss to the United States" Dr. Larsen said. Estimating the monetary loss he assumed that the wealth producing capacity of males from the age of 20 to 70 was $400. The annual loss from deaths due to tuberculosis on this basis is at least 179 million dollars.

Steal Workmen's Heavy Lined Coats

At noon Thursday L. W. List, Pennsylvania-Ohio Electric company lineman reported to the police that while he and other linemen of the company went for dinner that three young men had stolen their sheep skin coats from the P. & O. truck parked on State street.

Detective John Young and Officer Augostine were detailed and searched the district. Finally they came upon three young men walking on the railroad tracks toward Harbor Bridge and but a short distance from the city garbage plant.

The young men had on the stolen coats.

They were taken into custody and brought to the city police station. There they gave the names of Mike Cicritti, George Shaw and Charles Rasneck and claimed Philadelphia as their homes. They range in age from 21 to 25.

As the linemen do not care to prosecute the case and have secured the return of their coats the young men were allowed to go on their way with a warning against further stealing.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

By NORMAN E. BROWN

Sports Writer for Central Press and The New Castle News

The sport year of 1928 is past and accepted for what it was worth. What does 1929 hold for the fans in general?

Off-hand, these matters present themselves for dicussion.

A showdown on the return or retirement of Jack Dempsey. In view of Tex Rickard's recent efforts to bring Young Stribling and Jack Sharkey together in a spring battle in Miami, Dempsey's reported partnership with Rickard and others in sporting activities there, and the general dearth of "big time" boys in the heavyweight ranks, Dempsey's possible actions still form the leading topic of conversation in winter fanning bees.

The possible chances of the New York Yankees holding the American league pennant another year. The uncertain pitching staff, the need of a catcher and Huggins' willingness to affect several trades for material desired, would indicate that he is not satisfied with his present line-up.

The probable realignment of the American Davis cup team in what now would appear to be a vain effort to regain the cup, taken in handy fashion by the French last year.

The usual lapse in interest in track athletics—it being the first off-year after the Olympic. This interest may be stimulated a bit, however, by the appearance of Paavo Nirmi, Edwin Wide and other foreign stars, who have already reached the U. S. shores, or plan to within the next few weeks.

Stiffer competition than ever before in the major golf events—indicated by the success of the youthful Johnny Farrell in the open tourney last season, and the general play of other young stars.

Diligent effort on the part of the British polo enthusiasts to build a team which can furnish real opposition in the next international matches with America's four. The British army in India's team work last year was brilliant, but the service men were no match for the Meadowbrook squad.

As for football. The ever-growing interest in intersectional games, the rise of new teams to the foreground through the medium of such battles, and the reverses suffered by many of the "old guard" in the 1928 season ought to make the 1929 campaign a more interesting, if not a more hectic one than that just passed.

There is just one sure bet, however. That is that the old game of chasing the jolly nickel and keeping one step ahead of the sheriff at the same time will still furnish the real thrills of the year.

MAYBE!

Mrs. Jones—My dear, dead husband never complained of my cooking.

Syling Gets Hundred Calls By Persons Who Would Give Dog Home

County Superintendent of Schools, John C. Syling, had one of the liveliest times of his life, Thursday after The News came out saying that a dog near his home had been abandoned, and that any person could have the dog by calling at his home on Franklin avenue.

"I never saw anything like it in my life," said Superintendent Syling this morning. My telephone began ringing as soon as The News was out and from that time until midnight, rang almost constantly. Inquiries about the dog came from men, women and children. Most of them were from the city, but there were a number from the country.

"Business on the telephone became so brisk that I had to have assistance in answering the calls. I don't believe there was two minutes all evening that the phone was not in use. About 10 p. m. we were all tired out answering calls and went to bed, but that did not stop the telephone. It kept ringing until about midnight or after.

"Telephone calls were not all. Along about 4 o'clock, people started to coming to my house to inquire about the dog. They came in autos, in trucks and on foot. They represented all ages, from children to people well advanced in years.

"Some of them came equipped with ropes and chains with which to lead the dog home. Several of the trucks and automobiles had boxes in which to place the dog. On truck came with a big wire cage.

"I estimate that we received at least one hundred telephone calls, in addition to the people who came to the house."

Meanwhile the little white dog, the cause of all the commotion, became frightened as the crowd began to collect about the house where he had been abandoned. There is no cellar under part of the house and the dog crowled through a hole under the house and refused to come out. All kinds of pet names were used such as "pretty doggie, fine doggie, poor doggie, nice little doggie," but all to no avail. The dog, seeing a pair of human eyes peering in from every crack and crevice, crouched in fright and refused to budge. Even choice morsels of beefsteak, which some of the enthusiasts went and purchased for him, failed to cause him to come out.

As it became dark, flashlights were used by the crowd, but these only frightened the dog more, and so, at a later hour, efforts to coax him out from under the house were abandoned, and the crowd left.

Early this morning, before it was yet daylight, several persons returned, only to find that the dog was still under the house. Some of them left, but finally a little Maryland avenue boy, more courageous than the rest, managed to crawl under the house and coax the little dog out. He bore him triumphantly in his arms. The name of the boy was not learned.

Superintendent Syling says that all kinds of questions were asked about the dog. One woman wanted to know if it was a "poodle." Syling replied that it was not, but he thought that it might be a "Sooner," the woman said she had never heard of a "Sooner" dog, but would look it up.

Many Americans Visiting In Italy

ROME, Dec. 28.—North American tourists landing at Italian ports during the first ten months of 1928 numbered 35 per cent of the total, which was 82,000 passengers, in round numbers. This is against 79,000 tourists who landed during the whole of the previous year.

The British debarking in Italy constituted only 18 per cent of the sea-tourists' contingent. The Balkan countries, lumped together, furnished 16 per cent. The Germans contributed seven per cent of the total, the Latin-American five and the French four, while other countries taken en masse made up the rest, or 15 per cent.

Use Pig Bladders To Seal Gas Mains

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Canvas bags and pig bladders were used to seal gas mains against a repetition of the explosions which tore up nearly a mile of streets in the west end. The danger of further explosions remained and police, firemen and ambulance corps were stationed at various points.

The operation of sealing the mains consisted of boring down to the pipes through gas-impregnated earth, drilling a small hole in the pipe and inserting a canvas bag or a pig bladder which was then inflated. The canvas bags were used for the big mains and the bladders in the smaller ones. The inflation caused the bags and bladders to fill up the pipes.

Closing Bill Of Year Scores Biggest Hit

The management of the Capitol Theatre probably did not do it on purpose, but one might be persuaded that the reason for the show this half of the week is to close the year right. It isn't of course, for Charles Freeman is continually striving to improve his programs, but the fact remains that no better show has been seen in the theatre in months.

Nor is this just idle persiflage. There are four acts on the bill that have the ear marks of big time, and some of which came to New Castle by way of the Palace Theatre, Cleveland.

For instance the Meyer-Arko Revue. Most dance acts hope to get by on the sheer beauty of the girls. Occasionally you find one that gets by on nothing but merit and this revue is one of them. There is only one girl in it, but what a girl she is. One of the kind gentlemen prefer and how she can dance is nobody's business. With her are three boys who are hoofers who know what its all about.

The famous Newsboys quartet which played the Palace a week or so ago is on the bill, and if you've ever heard them or of them, it needs nothing here to tell you they are good.

The opening act is a Japanese tumbling act, the Yoki Trio, and these denizens of the Cherry Tree land are as clever as they are cute. Kennedy and Martin have a black face act that adds just the proper touch of comedy-relief to the bill.

The picture is "Red Lips" featuring Buddy Rogers and Marian Nixon. The management plans a New Year's Eve show on Monday evening, December 31, starting at 11:30. The picture for the first three days next week will be Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "Brotherly Love".

Cook Will Take Highland Run

Veteran To Leave Park Avenue Line After Many Years' Service

CHANGE TO OCCUR ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Earl A. Cook, well known street car operator, will soon be performing his duties for the Pennsylvania-Ohio Electric company and to the public, in new haunts—Highland avenue. Mr. Cook is one of the pioneer street carmen in this part of the country.

Cook started with the traction company May 3, 1897, and was assigned to the Cascade Park line which traverses South Mill street, Long avenue, through Hamilton street, through Shenango township to the park. For approximately 30 years he has "held down that run".

The public service commission recently gave sanction to the company to abandon operation of cars in Long avenue, Hamilton street, thence through Shenango township to the park, effective January 1.

Due to seniority rights with the company Cook has the privilege of accepting certain runs and has chosen an early run on the Highland avenue line, P.-O. officials state.

Mr. Cook is one of the oldest men, in point of service with the Pennsylvania-Ohio Electric Railway here.

Man Thought Dead In War Returns To Find Wife Married

LAREDA, Tex., Dec. 28.—A 20th century Enoch Arden was revealed here with the death of John Davis, laborer.

Davis, as he was known to his few friends here, a little more than 14 years ago, kissed his wife goodbye at their little home in Quebec, Canada, and went to France to fight for his country.

He was reported dead but came through the war without serious injury.

Returning to his little Quebec cottage, John La Rouche looked in the window, and like the Enoch Arden of fiction found another man happily married to his wife.

He gazed into the window for some time, and then wheeled on his heel and headed into the darkness.

When John La Rouche was seen again it was as John Davis, laborer in the Texas oil fields.

Until he was about to die, Davis kept his secret and not until then did he reveal the reason for his strange, quiet and secluded life.

Council Orders Old Church Wall To Be Removed

J. Clyde Gilfillan was informed by council in session today at city building that complaints have been received concerning the non-removal of the ruins of the First United Presbyterian church, it being believed that the walls are a menace.

Mr. Gilfillan told council he would have the walls examined and also expects to have them removed within a few days.

Councilman Tyler directed that the council officially, by letter, notify Mr. Gilfillan of the menace.

The rear walls at Cochran and Sycamore ways have not been removed and it is feared, the letters to council state, that a high wind may blow down the ruins with injury to persons or property.

Prairie Dog Is Not So Bad

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — Fried prairie dog is not so bad to eat when one can also wrap up in a blanket and sleep under the desert stars at night, says Miss Rachel Jenss, statistician of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Miss Jenss has returned from three months spent in New Mexico taking the census of the Navajo Indians. She also distributed to the Indians about 40,000 metal disks similar to the identification tags worn by the soldiers in the war.

"We had some thrilling and interesting experiences," says Miss Jenss, who is a slim, tall, blue-eyed young woman. "It was not hard to get the Indians to wear the disks around their necks. Stamped with the government seal as they are they look important and, besides, they gleam in the sunlight and are quite a decoration.

"I traveled by automobile with several assistants and visited many Indian villages and camps. I ate their food and enjoyed it. Fried prairie dog is not unlike fried chicken and when accompanied by baked corn, canned peaches and coffee it makes a very satisfying meal, especially after one has been out all day in that wonderful air. The Indians love canned peaches and will go a hundred miles to get a can of them."

Miss Jenss' position is unique in the government service. She has been with the Bureau of Indian Affairs one year, having previously been connected with a large insurance company. The first of the year she will make another trip into the Southwest to continue Indian census taking. Part of her work will be to locate about 500 Indian wards of Uncle Sam who are living in old Mexico.

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 28.—James B. Clark, nationally known motion picture leader and a vice president of the Stanley Company of America, and the former Alice Leech, are in New York today, having been secretly married here yesterday.

Miss Leech was formerly Mrs. H. Eggers of Pittsburgh, but recently resumed her maiden name.

While Clark' son-in-law, E. B. Gellatly, refused to give any particulars of the marriage, or tell where it was performed here he did confirm the report that the ceremony took place yesterday.

Lawrence County Man Tells Of Plight Of Barn Swallow

Herewith is presented the second of a series of three articles written for The News by Arthur Wright of Mahoning township and dealing with the insect eating birds of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Wright's first article published a few weeks ago dealt with the fast disappearing quail and pheasants of this section of the state. The present article is entitled "The Plight of the Barn Swallow."

In talking with a farmer of means who was raised on a farm and lived in the country all his life, I urged the need of more insect eating birds of the fly catching species, especially swallows. "Why" he said, "do swallows eat flies?"

Often when discussing subjects of mutual interest with some friend or neighbor I would make bold to mention our need of insect birds only to see a far away look steal into eyes; suddenly he would remember that he had work to do that had to be finished immediately. In my imagination I can hear a rustling of paper extend over this entire district when the readers of The News see the heading of this article and turn to a page of more interesting reading. Preaching the gospel of more insect eating birds has been rather discouraging so far.

Of the four species of swallows common to this locality, the barn swallow has always been the most active and most numerous, surviving adverse conditions the best. This article will deal mainly with them.

Fifty years ago every barn had openings in each gable for the swallows to fly in and out. In the log barns they could pass in and out almost anywhere. Every farm had its swallows as a matter of course. In my father's barn as many swallows nested as there are now in the entire Tent Hall school district. Our nearest neighbor David Hill had mud swallows which built a different style of nest outside and under the eves of the barn. These mud nests had oval openings and were packed closely together on the terrace plan. The two species fought for territorial rights, often to the death. They were about as bad as the sheep and cattle men out on the free ranges in the latter part of the eighties.

Swallows were so plentiful and so hungry that I have seen them flying back and forward over the cabbage patches picking up the cabbage patch millers. We never knew what it was to be bothered with cabbage worms then. When I first commenced to drive the mower the swallows would fly over the cutting bar, snapping up the moth millers of the cut worms as the machine made them fly up out of the grass. When we brought the cows in the morning the swallows flew in and out, under and among them catching any luckless flies or millers that their feet kicked up.

But with the passing of the log barns this is all changed. When barns were weatherboarded or rebuilt the swallows were relentlessly shut out of their old homes and breeding places until they have become so few that they are threatened with extinction, what with inbreeding and lack of vigorous exercise. The swallow of today is rich in what constitutes its wealth. In a few lazy flights through the air it can capture enough of the most toothsome flies to satisfy its own hunger as well as the hunger of its family. Then they loaf the rest of the time on telephone wires. It is as necessary to be strong and vigorous to make the flight to the south each fall as it is for the stay-at-homes to withstand the hard winters.

In crossing the Gulf of Mexico and the Carribbean Sea great numbers are lost in tropical storms which usualll blow them out into the north Atlantic ocean. Our own swallows slowly but surely have been dwindling in number; fewer return each spring from the south until we had but two pairs this summer. Unless there is something done in their behalf by those they benifit in providing more natural nesting places they are likely to go the way of the wood pigeon and the pheasant.

It is a hard thing to do, this telling my brother farmers that they are making a stupid and costly mistake in shutting the swallows out of their barns. In fact, it would be more pleasant to commend the many admirable things they are doing. But I plead to the farmers of Lawrence county to open up their barns so that the swallows can nest in them. In the near future let us have lots of hungry swallows that will eat up most of our cut worm millers, cabbage worm millers and cornborer millers as well as flies.

British Airship Trip Will Copy Idea Of Hoover

British Trade Circle May Counter Act Hoover's Good Will Tour

By J. KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The possibility of a member of the British government making a "goodwill" flight to South America aboard an airship to counteract what is termed "Hoover's Warship Tour for Trade" is being talked of in British trade circles.

The American President-elect's trip to South America is not looked upon any too favorably in the English trade world. It is taken as a direct step on the part of Hoover to strengthen the commercial relations between the United States and Latin American countries.

This step has long been expected but there was always a hope that Britain might make such a step first, and for a considerable time British business interest have been urging the development of commercial relations with the South American continent.

According to well-informed circles it was pressure from this source that inspired the Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, to declare in a recent speech that the British government would leave no stone unturned to cultivate and cement "this country's happy relations with the great and growing nations of South America."

With the announcement of Hoover's contemplated visit to the Latin American countries further pressure was brought to bear, and now it is understood a suggestion has been made to members of the cabinet that an airship should be sent on a good-will flight to the principal South American capitals.

Sir Samuel Hoare, the present secretary of state for air, is spoken of as the man best suited to head such a flight.

Endorsing the scheme as highly practical, Sir Alfred Robbins, the famous British journalist and author, says, "If we desire to impress the South American peoples from the commercial point of view, we shall have a much better opportunity of achieving our object by airship than by battleship, for the Latin-American peoples have little love for battleships, but an intense belief in airships."

Mr. Hoover is reported as very much impressed at the rapidity with which South America is being motorized. When the process has gone far enough, cars will suffice as instruments for disposing of the surplus populations and revolutions can safely be dispensed with.—The Waterbury Republican.

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The New Castle News

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Described by David Belasco as "without question Ferenc Molnar's greatest contribution to the stage," "Mima" starring Lenore Ulric is proffered at the theater bearing the illustrious producer's name. No more spectacular or pretentious theatrical production has ever been so magnificently and courageously chanced on the local stage by Mr. Belasco nor by any of his contemporaries but "Mima" for the greater part of the proceedings is an empty and uneventful entertainment.

A difficult verdict to render, too considering that the theatrical journals recorded that Mr. Belasco had expended nearly $300,000 to date on the spectacle. This great cost comes after eight weeks of rehearsals which included ful time wages for the players and much overtime salaries to the large musical crew and the number of stage mechanics necessary to operate the stupendous affair.

Belasco you suspected put every ounce of energy and every drop of blood into "Mima' a piece that is only arresting during the first few episodes chiefly because the great mechanical equipment on the stage in an unusual and novel experience for the playgoer. Max Reinhardt world famous perhaps could not have given "Mima" a more thorough and expert touch and the magic of Belasco did not fail him. The Molnar manuscript however proved stale and at times too dull for comfort in spite of the unanimous opinion of the European critical fraternity which indorsed it with all of the superlatives the language affords. However Mr. Belasco's adaptation may have been at fault.

Yet as "The Red Mill" all over the continent it foundered and one is amazed at the courage displayed by Mr. Belasco in gambling with the Eureopean failure on this side and at the favorable reaction of the foreign reviewers. The spectacle is fashioned out of bitter satire and reveals among other not very interesting things, how silks and Satan can corrupt a good man.

ADD RACKETS.

The New York Times building at Forty-second street and Broadway, now features a novel electric sign, which circles the edifice. It is described as a "runnig sign" in which words spell out sentences which furnish hot news before it is printed in the newspaper. It cost the firm $100,000 they say and is doing much to congest traffic at the world's busiest corner for great crowds collect or pause to read the headlines. The pickpockets might like to know at any rate.

However a new game has come out of it. Groups gather across the street every night and make wagers on the odd or even number of O's that appear in every five lines.

A WEE WHITE HOUSE.

It's just a wee house with a cool white porch,
And shutters that glitter importance in the sun,
It has a wee door and thru that door
Walks my life and love when the day is done.

In the narrow gate up the pebbled walk.
Straight he comes to my eager kiss.
Then we both live over the hours apart
Tell each other that . . . tell each other this.

Oh kings know glory of a different kind
And lovers in castles don't know much,
But two in a paid for wee white house
Seldom if ever, lose the magic touch, —Juanyta Clivette.

ADD AIR SLANGUAGE.

B. A. Rolfe who is interested in such things, offers some addenda to yesterday's stingy list of aviation slang: Frixample: Professional birdmen never say aeroplane. To them, all motored aircraft are "ships." To have a ship "on the line" means that it is warmed up and ready for a flight. "Crate" is a derisive term applied to antique planes. Government pursuit planes used in the war are referred to as "jennies.' A smash is caled a "crack-up" or a "crash." Propellers are "props." To "go upstairs" means to take a ride and "the ceiling" ends at the height one may fly without losing sight of the earth.

New German Device Allows Planes To Land On Ship Deck

Steamship Companies Plan To Equip Boats With Planes For Passengers

(International News Service)

LUBECK, Germany, Dec. 28.—A device enabling airplanes to leave or land on a regular passenger ship or merchantman has just been satisfactorily tried out by the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, which plans to equip its new steamers, "Europa" and "Bremen", with airplanes so that passengers who are in a hurry and especially urgent mail matter can be sent on ahead from the ship when it is still two or three days out.

Delayed post could also be brought on board after the ship had got well away from the harbor.

Heretofore, however, it has been impossible for airplanes to land or start from ordinary vessels. The new device, an invention of Engineer Hamann, was tried out on the Baltic steamer "Roland".

Over the stern a downward inclined platform has been built. From its lower edge a strip of sailcloth, 160 feet long and 26 feet wide, reinforced on the under side with wires and ropes, and ending in a wooden beam weighted with iron, is dragged at full speed. Starting from the top of the inclined platform, the airplane glides downward to the canvas and thence into the water. In order to come back on board it lands on the water near the end of the canvas, taxies along on to it and is then pulled on board with hawsers.

The canvas can be rolled up and stowed under the wooden platform. The trials of the new device were successful, although certain changes suggested themselves.

Permanent Display Of Relics Of Holy Land To Be Kept By University

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 28.—Relics of a city of 65,000 people that flourished for a thousand years and then slipped out of sight are being prepared for permanent display in Yale's galleries of fine art. The city of Gerasa that once stood on a site now some ninety miles northeast of Jerusalem, and its relics were dug out of the earth by a staff of the British school of archaeology headed by J. B. Robertson who has been in New Haven to describe his finds.

Professor Benjamin W. Bacon, a noted Yale archaelogist, originated the plan of uncovering Gerasa twenty years ago when he was director of the American school of Oriental Research in Jerusalem.

Dig Up Skeleton Of Giant Monster

Pre-Historic Animal Discovered In England, Is Largest Ever Found

(International News Service)

LEAMINGTON, Eng., Dec. 28.—An almost complete skeleton of a three-eyed plesionauros—a gigantic prehistoric monster—has been unearthed in quarries near here. The second to be unearthed in England in one year it is believed to be the largest ever found.

The bones measure 30 feet by 10 feet and are in a perfect state of preservation. Experts from the British museum will examine them shortly with a view to mounting them for exhibition.

Geologists estimate the remains to be anything between 100,000,000 and 200,000,000 years old.

Countess Bethlen Surprises Hungary By Producing Play

Satirical Drama, Planned By Countess, Soon To Be Shown At Budapest

(International News Service)

BUDAPEST, Dec. 28.—Count Stephen Bethlen, the dictator of Hungary, an unyielding champion of conservatism and opponent of woman's public activities seems to have less success in his own home than in the country he rules. His wife, Countess Margaret Bethlen, is dissatisfied with her old-fashioned standing as the wife and with her occupation as the Lady of the House, and started on an individual career as an author.

She surprised Budapest and probably also her husband, with a comedy, which will soon be performed in one of the best theatres of this city, the Comedy Theatre. And not only that. The play is a social satire based on an intellectual and a sex problem.

The title and other details of the play are kept secret until the first performance.

Hungary Leading In Divorce Cases

Shares World's Record In Number Of Proceedings With America

(International News Service)

BUDAPEST, Dec. 28—Hungary is leading among the European states in the number of divorces and is at the present sharing the world record with the United States.

The Hungarian divorce rate per 100,000 population is 152 (the same as shown by the last statistics of the U. S.) which is more than five times as much as the British rate, according to the Hungarian deputy Stephan Bernat, who has recently submitted this data to the Budapest parliament demanding an energetic action of the government against the immorally inclined citizens of Hungary.

The government promised the reform and moralizing of the divorce laws. Some deputies of the opposition, however, expressed wears that such action might increase the suicide rate of Hungary, which is also higher than that of any other country in Europe or America.

Tourists May Get Airplane Service At National Parks

(International News Service)

DENVER, Dec. 28.—Rocky mountain scenery from the air may be possible for tourists visiting either the Rocky Mountain National park, of which Estes park is the entrance, or Mesa Verde National park located in the southwest part of Colorado.

Airplane service at convenient points and permission by the government for private planes to fly over the park will be discussed by government officials at a meeting to be called within the next few months. The meeting will be attended also by railroad men through whose efforts the parks have been developed in years past, hotel men and others interested in the project.

Estes park already has an airport, it was pointed out. It would be the object of the plan to build additional landing fields and hangars that would be ready to give service to private planes for a service charge. It has been proposed that the railroads be permitted to build airports at convenient points near their stations, and granted the privilege of transporting passengers to the airports which would be used by privately owned planes.

Spirited Contest Over Election

National Collegiate Athletic Association Conference Drawing To Close

(International News Service)

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 28.—A spirited contest between Dr. Palmer E. Pierce, incumbent, and Dr. S. V. Sanford, of Georgia, for the presidency of the National Collegiate Athletic Association loomed today as the association's annual conference drew towards an end.

The National Association of football coaches, meeting with the N. C. A. A., held its first session today. The mentors were scheduled to receive several drastic proposals to alter the present gridiron rules. However, opposition was lined up for each.

The proposals likely will include a revision on the ruling on the point after touchdown, advocating its discontinuance; making a fumbled ball "dead" at the point of recovery; providing that the ball be placed in play at the start of the third quarter at the point it lay when the quarter ended.

The first session of the N. C. A. A. was held yesterday behind closed doors.

English Mills See Future Hope From Artificial Cotton

Expect Four Million Pounds Of Artificial Stuff Will Be Ready In July

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Lancashire and Yorkshire cotton mills, which have been under a bad spell during recent years, hope to regain their lost export trade during the coming two years.

Between three and four million pounds of artificial cotton are now being grown in Essex and Sussex which is expected to be available next July to every cotton spinner in the country at a fixed price of twelve cents a pound, an immediate saving of eight cents a pound on what they are now paying.

This artificial cotton is being grown in England in sufficient quantities to produce an annual crop large enough in quantity and good enough in quality to meet the demand of the "coarse count" required for the entire cotton industry. It can be treated, it is stated by the existing cotton machinery without any thing better expended on new plant, and the yarn can be blended, as cotton is, with artificial silk, silk, and wool, taking the most delicate of dyes, and,—another important economy—absorbing less than one-third of the amount of dyes employed in the present process.

Already weaving houses in North and Midlands of England have tested the new process in all its spheres and state they are satisfied in results.

Attorney Starts Battle Against Malt-Hop Trade

(International News Service)

COVINGTON, Ky., Dec. 28—A legal assault upon the malt and hop business has been launched here by Sawyer A. Smith federal district attorney.

Smith contends that the malt and hops business is based upon the use of those commodities for ilegal home brewing of beer and has ruled that arrests of sellers of malt and hops should proceed. On this theory Anthony Droege, local grocery store owner, was arrested and federal prohibition agents are threatening to arrest managers of a number of chain stores in this vicinity.

The malt and hops dealers contend that their wares are used in preparing many food products and that they are engaged in a legitimate business.

Legion Officials Receive Report Of Hospital Plan

American Legion officials here have just received word from Col. Robert U. Patterson, the commanding officer of the Army and Navy General hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., that an effort is being made at present to have the hospital there rebuilt in order to afford greater service in its field.

To quote the commanding officer: "You may have noted that the chief of staff, Major Charles P. Summerall, has appointed a board consisting of the surgeon general and two other officers of the medical corps to confer with the director of the veteran's bureau concerning the survey of this general hospital. I presume, with a view to the consideration of rebuilding the hospital in the future, that a new one might be erected in the next two years were the project pushed."

The letter came to P. J. Dempsey, assistant commander of the 26th Pennsylvania American Legion district for Lawrence county. Dempsey and other New Castle ex-soldiers were confined to this hospital following and sometime after the world war. Local interest in the hospital is considerable owing to this fact, and it is announced by officials of the Legion here that the project will be backed teeth-and-nail by the members of the Legion of Pennsylvania if the board's decision approves the reconstruction.

Do these two things to avoid "flu"

Keep your system in good condition; also protect your nose and throat

There's no need to get panicky, because the papers are full of news of an influenza epidemic. There's no use in isolating yourself because a lot of other people are sick with it. If you take certain simple precautions every day—and then don't worry—the chances are you will throw off any "flu" germs you are exposed to, and keep well.

We're not recommending that you dose yourself with a lot of medicines, either. Just observe two common-sense health rules which can be easily followed.

FIRST of all, make sure your system is in first class order. Don't let it get slowed up or sluggish. See to it that it functions perfectly. The easiest way to get run down and in a condition to pick up disease is to neglect this all-important matter.

Physicians agree that, particularly in times of epidemic, purging by laxatives and cathartics is not advisable. Many doctors are therefore prescribing Nujol, as in no case does it cause exhaustion or weakening of the system in any way.

Nujol can't possibly upset you or disagree with you. For it contains absolutely no medicine or drugs.

Get a bottle today at your nearest drug store and start taking Nujol tonight as one simple way to keep fit and to protect yourself against influenza.

That's the first precaution. Now for the second. Keep your nose and throat well protected with Mistol.

Dr. David says:

"You can't help breathing air that's laden with 'flu' germs and other bacteria these days. But you can protect your nose and throat against them. Keep them from lodging there and breeding and causing trouble.

"I'm advising all my patients these days to keep Mistol on hand and use it regularly. The first thing in the morning before you go out. And again at night when you come home. Don't be afraid to use it freely. It will do no harm. And then stop worrying. You've done all you can to safeguard yourself.

"Put Mistol up your nose. There's a special dropper that comes in every package that makes it very easy to use. Just tilt your head back and drop it in your nose until you feel it in your throat. You'll notice the pleasant, cleansing effect at once. Mistol clears your head and makes breathing easy. It has a healing, soothing effect on the membranes and relieves any irritation or inflammation. It helps dry up a running nose. Use it, too, as a gargle. Mistol is good for a sore throat or hacking cough. And above all, protects the nose and throat against germs.

"Don't wait till you begin to sneeze or your throat aches. Take my advice and get a bottle of Mistol today. Every druggist knows it."

The combination treatment of Nujol and Mistol is a double safeguard against influenza. Start this wise two-fold precaution now. Don't delay.

Nujol and Mistol are both made by the same famous laboratories, of the finest quality materials and with the greatest skill possible. Both preparations are harmless. At all druggists. Aren't they worth trying?

Once it was said "The good die young." Now it's the reckless driver who does it.

If you envy a man's righteousness, the only chance is to become a cynic and scorn him.

Nothing in a show window so enraptures a fair shopper as the mirror at the back of the window.

Pauline New Year's Resolutions

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

This is the time for "New Year's Resolutions," for inventories and the determining of new policies that will yield better returns for 1929 than the records show for 1928. No better resolution for the governing of our lives this new year could be formulated than we have in our golden text for this review lesson, viz: "For me to live is Christ." This must have been the life motto of the Apostle Paul, and we would do well to make it ours.

Taking up the lessons of the past three months with a view to finding suggestions for New Year's resolutions, the first lesson suggests the resolution to preserve in well doing in spite of obstacles. Paul suffered opposition and persecution in Ephesus, as everywhere else, but when rejected by one group he sought another, and continued in spite of the riot and tumult raised against him until in the course of three years he had built up a great congregation. His spirit is expressed in these words: "A great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." This is the spirit with which we should enter the great door and effectual with 1929 opens to us.

This perseverance will prove a questionable blessing to ourselves and others unless it is tempered by Christian love as Paul teaches us in our second lesson. Love is the gift supreme. It exceeds and survives all other gifts, and its absence will utterly spoil any and every gift. "Love never faileth—the greatest of these is love." Let us covet earnestly this best of all gifts.

The acid test of love is our willingness to give of ourselves and of our substance, so our third lesson on Christian Stewardship suggests that we highly resolve that this New Year shall be for us a giving as well as a getting year.

In Paul's farewell address to the elders of the Church of Ephesus we have an autobiography of a faithful servant that every workman may well covert: "Ye know after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears and temptations, and how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you and have taught you publicly and from house to house. I have coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel."

Lessons five to six suggest the civic duties which must not be overlooked by the Christian citizen in his effort to render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's as well as unto God the things that are God's. He will earnestly lend his influence to the cause of international peace and good will, remember that nations as well as individuals are to "be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

A resolution most of us may well make is suggested by the prayer life of Paul. There is no accounting for his colossal accomplishments except his calling to his aid constantly the omnipotence of deity. We can empower or empoverish our lives according as we use or neglect the privilege of prayer.

The richness of Paul's life towards God did not preclude his living a life marvelously rich in its human friendships. For him to live was Christ, yes, and we may also say, for him to live was his friends, for he lived for them. It may be said of him as it was of the Christ, that "he increased in favor with God and men."

(The International Uniform Lesson for December 30 is the quarterly review, the subject being: "Paul the World Christian," and the Golden Text, Phil. 1:21: "For me to live is Christ.")

"Bossy" Gillis Is Halted By Officer, Was Driving Fast

(International News Service)

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 28. — Newburyport's bad boy, Mayor "Bossy" Gillis, who left his home state of Massachusetts a few days ago to tour a number of cities and give brief talks was threatened with another prison term last night when he broke the speed law of the little town of Minooka, near here, it became known Thursday.

"Bossy" and members of an orchestra he is traveling with were racing through Minooka when Patrolman Peter Heston blew his whistle and stopped "Bossy's" car. "Bossy" got pale and speechless.

"What's the big idea of the gallop? Want to kill some one?" remanded Heston.

Then "Bossy" found his tongue. He made known his identity and said he was in a hurry to keep an engagement in Wilkes-Barre.

"Guess you're not a bad guy after all," said Heston. "But the next time cut out the speed stuff."

"Bossy" was all smiles.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

The Emblem of Youth

By Joella Johnson

LAURA HAMILTON awoke on the morning of her 34th birthday with a curious feeling of thrilling anticipation. She lay, relaxed and heavy-eyed, between the worlds of dreams and reality. She wanted to slip back into unconsciousness, for of course nothing exciting was waiting for her, only a stupid dinner that evening with friends.

She opened her eyes. Her idle gaze noted with subconscious pleasure the charm of her room; the wide windows, flooded with early sunshine, with their hangings of creamy lace and rose taffeta, the serenity of her dressing table with its chaste ivory appointments. It was a girl's room, dainty, feminine; no one ever thought of Laura Hamilton as an advocate of votes for women. She still retained her little-girl habit of eating the whipped cream from the top of her chocolate first and the frosting off her cake.

She heard her husband moving about in the next room. How inexpressibly precious it would be if he would come in, lean over her with a caress, and say, "Many happy returns of the day, darling."

Well, she must get up; if she wasted any more time over sentimental dawdling Edward would leave the house without a proper breakfast, very likely arrayed in gray trousers and a brown coat, his pet failing when he was preoccupied.

And she must remind him about the dinner tonight; if the important case in which he was engaged did not not finish today she would have to beg their hostess to excuse them. Edward's idiosyncrasies, even after ten years of marriage, never failed to intrigue her imagination. She knew that if he lost this case he would absorb gratefully all the sympathy she would shower upon him, but if he won it she would never know it by anything he told her.

Strange how the feeling of expectation persisted; she felt like a tiny girl again who was going to—her mind roved amid adventurous speculations—yes, that was it, like a tiny girl who was going to the circus. Circus. Instantly she was wide awake; she had found the key. There was something to expect; something out of the ordinary was going to happen. She had lived 34 years, ten of them married. Fifteen years ago today how vividly it all came back to her. The motley, surging, boisterous crowd, almost hysterical children, the mammoth tent that swallowed one with a gulp and turned one into Alice in Wonderland.

Her high mood of exhilaration made breakfast a mental feast. When her husband picked up the morning paper for a hurried glance before he left the house, she leaned over him for a moment and read off the date, covertly watching his face for a change of expression, but her elaborately careless feeler hit no mark at all.

A conjugal kiss, hasty and perfunctory, and Laura Hamilton was left alone to—wait. Each ring of the back door bell was it. Even when the maid's heavy tread and colloquial persiflage, according to the quality of her liking, proclaimed it to be the ice man, the fruit man or the laundry boy, her faith never wavered. She wondered why she felt so confident. It had got to cease some time, but she knew it would come this year; she just couldn't be 34 yet, she was still 18. She had felt 18 on this, her natal day, for the last 15 years; of course, some day, when it didn't come, she would be 35 and 36 and 37, and on and on.

The bell rang again. Just footsteps, no badinage. Waves of emotion swept over her and left her trembling. Not the emotion which always engulfed her during one of Edward's rare moments of articulate love, but the emotion of the circus, clamorous, reckless, effervescent.

It was a modest box. She knew exactly what it would contain. There they lay, glowing chalices of gold; her favorite flowers, they had always held for her more than a promise of Spring. It had been her birthday that hilarious day of the circus 15 years ago and Francis her first grown-up sweetheart, the others had been boys. He had wanted to buy her a bunch of violets; she remembered it had an arrogant crimson rose in its center. Shyly she had expressed a preference for jonquils. She had been too self-conscious then to explain that she never wore flowers because she could not bear to see them die for the want of water, just as she could not bear to see a doll neglected, but she had tried to tell him how their bravery, their jaunty defiance of winter, their shimmering uprighteousness warned her heart, and he had understood. He had said they were just like her, "gallant," that was the word he had used.

There were just enough for one vase. Her fastidious sense gloried in this rightness; a divided beauty would lose all beauty. She sat musing happily. It hadn't even been a love affair, just an understanding, gay comradery for a fleeting year, and then he had gone away.

Frequent letters passed between them and each year on her birthday the little token of yellow loveliness had arrived. And then the fourth year she had met Edward. She had written Francis all about him, very simple, very sincerely. She had expected that the graceful tribute to memory would cease, but each year it had never failed her. She thought tenderly of her deep, abiding love for her husband; this imprisoned sunshine spilled all over the room was no disloyalty to her love for him. It was just a symbol, a symbol of her girlhood that sometimes seemed so far behind her; an assurance that restored her faith that she was still desired, her memory still so cherished that her birthday was a day set apart from all others.

Mrs. Jordan's dinner that evening was a great success, especially from Mrs. Jordan's point of view. Shrill voluble greetings of a flushed hostess and a glittering diamond bracelet, triumpantly dangled before their eyes, proclaimed that it was Mrs. Jordan's birthday, "warnings of which I Ihave had morning, noon and night for the last month, Mr. Jordan rather apologetically added.

The dinner moved on in a cloud of dreamy abstraction for Laura Hamilton. Her reflection smiled back at her from an opposite mirror; soft brown hair becomingly, but unfashionably, arranged, eyes of the clearest blue overshadowing her simple blue gown, she saw herself in a haze as though it were another woman; yes, she looked all of her 34 years, but her heart, that was 18, and delicious little thrills, sweet as the tingling silvery grace notes of a harp, flushed her cheeks a warmer rose.

When they reached home, as was his custom, Edward Hamilton settled himself comfortably in his special chair to read and smoke a last cigar. Lamplight did not dim, but only enhanced, the golden splendor which glorified the table beside him. His wife hovered above the shining mass.

"Lovely golden darlings," she breathed rather than spoke.

Her husband looked up and smiled absently. For one moment Laura Hamilton was ruled by that subconscious feline, feminine instinct which always lies dormant in every woman. She wanted to hurt, to salve her pride; she wanted him to speak about the flowers, she wanted to say with vicious sarcasm, "Yesterday happened to be my birthday and an old sweetheart has never forgotten even if you have," but, being a gentle woman as well as a loving one, she returned his smile, dropped a light kiss on the top of his head and carried the shining emblem of her youth into her bedroom, so she would still be 18 when she awoke the next morning.

First Worker—Wasn't that the noon whistle?

Second Worker—Gee, you don't suppose it was the echo, d'ye?

A Deadly Grievance

By Monte Darrell

PRUDENCE sank into a chair, placed her feet determinedly together, and brought a very serious face to rest in the cupped hollow of her hands. The long window directly beside her was open to admit the soft Summer air, and through it the steady hum of a motor reached her ears, gradually getting fainter as it speeded into the distance.

For a few moments she kept her position, wrinkling her forehead in nervous thought and eyes winking bravely to keep back rebel tears. Then, jumping quickly up, she began to pace the room, a favorite habit with her when troubled.

Crying stormily, she flung herself on a nearby couch, making a wrinkled ruin of the peach-colored organdy gown that she had carefully laid there before donning it, in happy anticipation of the hours its loveliness would spend beside Sefton that long Summer afternoon.

Lyle had begged in her most charming manner to be allowed to monopolize Sefton for just one more afternoon, positively the last time, for her business in Winthrop would be completed that day and Prudence, trying to keep suspicion out of her voice and manner, had consented.

Lyle's own particular admirer, who had planned on an afternoon with her, also had been very much disappointed when he came over and found her already gone. He had tried to get Prudence to console him, but she was in no fit mood, so he had departed, sadly musing on the fickleness of girls and wondering, for his own part, what secret business could engage Sefton's car so much, when his own would have done quite as well.

After a while Prudence's storm of tears had spent itself, and as she lay on the couch quietly, memories of all the fine, high-souled part of Lyle's nature kept drifting into her mind. The day Prudence's mother had died, Lyle had been the chief source of comfort to the grief-stricken girl, doing all the packing that Prudence's tremulous hands refused to do properly, making arrangements for the trip home and finally getting permission to leave college with her, staying with her through all the long, dark days of grief.

Then, again, when Prudence's father had been on the verge of failure in his modest business, Lyle, coming of a very wealthy family, had interested her own father to the point of extending a loan that had safely tided over the critical period. As Prudence marshalled all these memories and reviewed them, it began to seem rather hard to believe that a girl so supremely a true unselfish friend could deliberately mean to steal the man to whom she was engaged.

She rose from the couch, ruefully surveyed the organdy, and then, hanging it away in the closet, took out a filmly gray chiffon gown that Sefton especially admired and slowly put it on. She applied a slight film of powder to the too shiny satin of her skin, and loosened the hair that had flatened down by her lying on the couch. A hat of gray chiffon, wreathed in rose colored silk poppies, pulled on at a charming angle and with a little smile of renewed faith, completed her brief toilet, and she went out to meet them on their return.

"Positively the last time," announced Lyle, jumping out of the smart blue roadster as it purred to a stop. "If Jack hasn't disowned me entirely for not letting him in on this secret, then my business will be very pleasantly completed. But we didn't dare tell him, because he might have told you, and that wouldn't have been a bit nice. Besides, we wanted to surprise him, too, when he sees it. Shall I tell her now, Sef?"

"Sure," he grinned.

"All right then, Prudence, dear," she said tenderly, "tomorrow's your birthday, but your birthday present's too bulky to bring here. I bought it a week ago, and Sef's been helping me furnish it with that rustic furniture you admired so much."

"Not the camp on Lake Placid I've wanted so long!" gasped Prudence.

"The very same one, and all I ask is that you let me come every Summer to have a good time there with you. Oh, here comes Jack with a doleful face! Gather her in, Sef, and we'll all go over to see it."

With a singing heart, Prudence entered Sefton's car, and in a moment the road burned under the two roadsters.

The Mystery Man

By Margaret Taylor

ELLA glanced back at her long, graceful train, heavily encrusted with pearls and brilliants. She switched it carelessly this way and that to note the effect.

"You and I are a gorgeous pair," she murmured to the peacock who preened himself beside her, his splendid tail iridescent in the midday sun.

"Sufferin' snakes," ejaculated a loud, strident voice at Ella's elbow. "Haven't you gathered the eggs yet? And what are you strutting around for, shakin' yourself like a dog with a flea?"

Ella jumped, and the little old red hen that had been picking around the floor at her feet scuttled away in alarm.

Mrs. Holmes, face crimson from her rubbing over the washtub, arms pink from their recent immersion in suds, stared at her daughter in exasperation.

"Swashday," she snapped, "and the sink's full of dishes and the beds ain't made. Stir your stumps! Stir your stumps now!"

Ella followed her out of the small stuffy barn and across the small patch of ground known as the backyard. The ground was frozen hard and uneven under Ella's thin, worn shoes, and there was a feeling of snow in the sharp air that cut through her old percale dress. She sighed. The snow would be welcome when it finally fell. It would lay like a soft white blanket over shabby Cutler street, hiding heaps of rubbish in front yards, covering the old, unpainted roofs and sagging fences. How Ella hated shabbiness.

The kitchen was filled with the wet smell of clothes in suds. Tears of steam ran down the window panes. Everything felt soggy and dank.

"Now git busy!" said Mrs. Holmes, attacking the colored clothes.

Obediently Ella got the dishpan out. As she washed, her thoughts flew ahead to the evening. She was meeting the Mysteryman that night. They were going for a long ride and afterwards they would call on some friends of his. This would be the first time since she met him so casually, two weeks ago, that she had ever gone outside the city with him. They had ridden around the park evenings. She had called him the Mysteryman and he had called her the Princess. Tonight they were to disclose to each other their real names.

O, it was silly, she supposed, this make-believe. But she'd die if she couldn't pretend. It gave her a world of her own making, where things happened as she wanted them to. Of course, the Mysteryman knew that she was just a little girl in shabby clothes, but he, too, could pretend delightfully.

She could see him at the wheel of his roadster. Raccoon coat up around his ears, soft hat pulled down almost to meet it. And his blue eyes keen but full of fun. And there had been a time when she thought Tod Hanson good looking—Tod with his stiff, unruly hair and work-grimed finger nails!

She wiped a red and white plate. It reminded her somehow—of the face of the fat saleslady in furs at Shurtz. Furs . . . she loved furs. How heavenly it must be to feel the silkiness of sable around one's ears! Perhaps ermine would be softer.

"I'll take this little ermine wrap," she cried, pirouetting around on one foot.

"Mi gosh! Mi gosh! Will you finish them dishes and stop ravin'?" wailed her mother, beating her hands on her heavy hips.

Ella finished the dishes and went upstairs to make the beds. In John's room clothes lay in untidy heaps on the old softwood floor. A broken saucer on the bureau was heaped with cigarette stubs. A big blob of gum stuck to one white iron bedpost. There was a picture of a dancer on the wall—a lovely girl who had been clipped from the pages of some current magazine.

Ella gazed at her enchanted. Suddenly she began to dance with wild abandon. She was the great Pavlova leaping on a golden stage before a charmed audience. She was . . .

Ella leaned breathlessly back against the cushions of the roadster. Trees rushed past them, sharp pointed and dark against the Winter sky; houses, glowing with yellow lights, were now a mile ahead, now abreast, and now gone in a dizzy procession. The wind sang in her ears and a thin shaving of a new moon threw a pale light on the frozen road.

She glanced up at the Mysteryman's profile, a little blurred under his hat. He smiled at her and reached for her hand. She could feel her heart thumping against her ribs as her fingers lay in his. To think . . . to think that she had once thought Tod Hanson approached her ideal!

"Here we are," said the Mysteryman, stopping the car. Ella glanced around curiously. At their right loomed a building large enough to be a hotel, she thought, with its downstairs blazing with light.

The Mysteryman gave a muttered exclamation and slumped in his seat.

"It's all right," he replied in answer to Ella's alarm. "Just a weak spell. But I don't feel quite up to that call tonight. I wonder if you'd run in with a package for me? Don't say anything about my being here. I don't want anyone to make a fuss over me. Mind doing that?"

"No-o," said Ella wonderingly. "But don't you want me to call a doctor?"

"Just take this in, ask for Mr. Smith, and hurry right back," answered the Mysteryman, giving her a large, heavy package he had taken out of the back of the car.

"Too heavy for you?" he queried, as she staggered a little under the first shock of its weight.

"Look out!" cried the man a moment too late. Ella had lost her balance and she and the package crashed to the cement walk.

Something sweetish and pungent smelling was leaking from the package. Ella sniffed. Whisky. She sat quite numb and still on the cold ground. Someone had heard the crash and had come out to talk to the Mysteryman in a low voice. The Mysteryman! Ella got to her feet with a small wry smile.

Her Mysteryman was a common bootlegger! And he had meant to use her as a pawn. A pawn. Her imagination leapt. The Woman Deceived. The Woman Scorned.

They were alone again and she turned on him, shivering a little in her thin old coat.

"Go," she cried, her voice trembling. "Let me never look upon your face again!" Her voice quavered and almost broke. The Woman Deceived. She must remember she was playing the Woman Deceived.

"I go to telephone an old trusted friend. One who has never failed me. He will take me home in his 12-cylinder Packard. Don't try to detain me, quavered the Woman Deceived.

But the astounded bootlegger had no intention of detaining her. After the first outburst he had started for his car.

"Go, viper, go!" cried the Pawn, the tears running unchecked down her cheeks.

Ella climbed the steps and pressed the door-bell wearily.

"What a mess I'll be in if Tod's old flivver is hung up," she sighed.

A Rare Jewel

By Claire Wesson

"WELL," remarked Grandma Tracy amiably, "handsome is as handsome does." She was a grandma of the old school, a comfortable person much given to knitting furiously, to advising one to wear Winter flannels and to smiling placidly over one's minor sins, remarking only that young people are always up to something.

Greta smiled at her pityingly. What could Grandma know of beauty? Greta pitied anyone who was not young, anyone who did not dance, and to whom was denied the supreme joy of wearing a sleeveless evening dress. Greta had worn one herself for the first time last night. She looked lovely in blue and she was aware of it. Why couldn't Grandma admit it for once, instead of quoting old saws?

"You may as well say the other one, too," she pouted. "Clothes do not make the man."

Grandma withdrew a flashing needle. "I was counting stitches," she returned. "I'd have said it in a minute more."

"It isn't as if they were true," objected Greta, observing herself critically in the glass opposite. "If I had worn a gingham dress last night no one would have noticed me. And if I had behaved beautifully, Byron would not have—" She stopped abruptly, her color high.

"He'd have kissed you whether you made eyes at him or not." Grandma nodded wisely without looking up. "Do you suppose any young man would waste all that moonlight?"

"H-how did you know?" gasped Greta.

"They're all alike at that age," returned the old lady.

Greta ground her teeth. As if Byron were like anyone else in the world! But, of course, it seemed so to a very old person like Grandma.

If Mrs. Tracy did not appreciate Greta's appearance at the dance, there were others besides Byron who did. It seemed to the old lady that they came in droves, though each of them had obviously intended to come alone. And to Mrs. Tracy these young men seemed very much alike, though Greta perceived glowing differences.

Mrs. Tracy watched her granddaughter rather anxiously during the weeks that followed. Pretty heads were easily turned at her age. There was no particular objection to Greta's obvious preference for Byron, but the older woman felt that she wanted to know this boy and all the others a little better.

"Have them come one at a time, Greta," she advised. "I'd like to put them through their paces."

"Are you sure you know them apart?" laughed Greta. "You wait till Grandpa comes back. He'll tell you they're not all alike."

She invited the boys to her home one at a time, however, and she was very anxious that each should make a good impression on her grandmother, whom she adored in spite of her pity. It was not until the third in her series of swains had made his appearance that Greta guessed what her sly grandmother was up to. The girl's cheeks burned with indignation, but she was helpless.

"We expect my husband home from the wedding, soon," Mrs. Tracy remarked in the course of conversation. "He stayed there for quite a visit. Funny thing." Her fingers flew over the needles. "My sister's girl has just been married, and her husband is Mr. Tracy's nephew. And the bridesmaids are all cousins of one or the other."

Greta twisted nervous fingers. Grandma had said exactly those words to the other two boys who had called. Not from lack of topics, you may be sure. Grandma was slyly trying to prove to her that all her boy friends were alike! She waited breathlessly for Harold's reply.

The boy nodded politely. "Quite a family affair, wasn't it?" he said pleasantly. Hot tears rose to Greta's eyes. That was just what John and Luther had said!

Grandma knit placidly on. She was too wise to point the moral. And, anyway, Greta didn't really care about Harold. What troubled her was the fear that Byron would fall into the same trap. And if he did, she felt somehow that it would belittle him in Grandma's eyes. It wasn't fair! Of course the boys were not quite at their ease talking with Grandma. They said, naturally, the first platitude which occurred to them.

It happened that Grandpa Tracy returned on the day that Byron was to make his call. Greta had deliberately saved her favorite until the last, in order that he might shine by contrast. But in her rejoicing over her grandfather's return she forgot for a time the impending crisis.

Mr. Tracy was in the midst of recounting his adventure that evening when the bell rang. Greta's heart sank. "It's Byron," she said, and went to the door.

Grandma smiled on the young man. "Mr. Tracy was just telling us of his trip," she said, with a twinkle in her eye. Greta looked up just in time to see the twinkle and her heart was hardened. Grandma was up to her old trick again! But Byron should not fall into the trap! Her cheeks flaming, the girl took the conversation into her own hands.

"Yes, and imagine, Byron," she cried. "Grandma's niece married Grandpa's nephew, and all the bridesmaids were cousins. Wasn't that it, Grandpa?"

The old gentleman chuckled. "Yes, indeed," he agreed, "it was quite a family affair."

Greta gasped and looked at her grandmother. This was a triumph beyond her hopes. But Mrs. Tracy was twinkling quietly to herself. She smiled at Greta, not as very old lady to very young girl, but as one woman to another.

"Isn't it just as I've always said?" she laughed, with a teasing look at Grandpa. "They're all alike at that age."

"Does your cook try to make food go as far as possible?"

Mrs. Legge—"Yes, some of it goes all the way from our house to hers."

He Deserved It

By Phil Moore

KNOW him?" asked the well-groomed man in the smoking car, as he passed a paper to the chap in the next seat, pointing, as he did so, to a picture on the front page.

"Only by reputation," responded the other. "Some big gun, I'll tell the world! What's this? President of one of the largest trust companies in the country at the age of 42. That certainly is some jump! Know him yourself?" he queried.

"Yes, somewhat. I used to see a lot of him in college. Went to M—, you know." As the big man settled back comfortably and helped himself to a fresh cigar the other scented a story.

"Tell me about him," he suggested.

"Well, I'm not surprised at his making good. You see, he was treasurer of a city bank at a salary of $8,000 before he'd been out of college ten years. He had the stuff right in him. In fact, when he was in college he did one of the finest things I ever saw a chap do.

"Yes?" the other prompted.

"There was a fellow there by the name of Riley—O'Riley, they all called him, for his middle initial was O. Well, he'd got to be a junior, and a crack football player—many a touchdown he made in those days. I've always supposed the scheme was hatched up by some rival to put him off the team. But, however that may have been, one Fall, just before the big games, the story got around the campus that O'Riley was bad, drank, stayed downtown a lot, that his roommate never seemed to know where he was nights, and a lot more such stuff.

Of course, the faculty heard of it, and O'Riley was called up and questioned. He told a straight enough story, but somehow it didn't hold water. Prexie was still suspicious, and finally a faculty meeting was called to see whether or not they would expel O'Riley. He was requested to appear—and so was the president of the Student Government Council. Well sir—that was Collins—and he told me afterwards that he lay awake nights trying to think how he could convince that faculty that O'Riley was innocent—for innocent he knew him to be. When the Monday afternoon of the meeting came everybody on the campus held his breath. The students were about evenly divided—men and women—and excitement ran high. It was the first time but one in the history of the college that a student had been asked to appear in faculty meeting—and everyone wondered what Collins would say.

"To make a long story short—after two hours the faculty filed out and announcement was made that O'Riley was cleared and would remain in college! Then the big bell was rung, just as in a football victory, and the faction against O'Riley dwindled considerably! One of the young instructors who was at the meeting told me what happened. It seems Prexie called on O'Riley to speak for himself first. He talked about two minutes, then broke down and was dismissed. Collins had expected that they would question him, but instead of that Prexie simply said:

"Mr. Collins, the faculty will now listen to any statement you may care to make." He said afterward he could feel the antagonism—was sure their minds were really made up. One or two looked at their watches and there was a general air of impatience. Collins said his heart was in his mouth, but he made up his mind he'd go down fighting. Just imagine, if you will, that dignified body of 28 men and three women—and that mere stripling of a boy! The atmosphere was enough to freeze the courage of a far older man. But Collins began—as he went on he told me he forgot everything except that he must make them see that O'Riley was innocent.

"Finally he stopped—the women were in tears and several of the men blew their noses hard. Then Prexie excused him and requested him to wait outside the door. In a few minutes, out filed the faculty. Collins was asked to take the news to O'Riley that there had been a unanimous vote in his favor."

"What became of O'Riley? Oh, he made a brilliant success of his last year and is making good now. He says frankly that he owes it all to Collins, for if the faculty had expelled him, he had made up his mind to become what they thought him. And now—oh, yes—there is a little romance connected with it, too! For at Thanksgiving, Collins took O'Riley home with him—and his sister and O'Riley fell in love right off! He married her in two years and they have three lovely children. So, you see, he owes his wife, as well as his reputation, to Collins! That's the kind of man Collins is—and I'm glad to see him get such a boost! He deserves it, every bit! Hi, there, that's my station—look me up sometime. Here's my card!"

And as the big man swung off the platform to kiss a handsome woman and a small girl, the man in the car was staring at a card which read:

A CARROT "HANGING-BASKET"

First select a large, firm carrot, and cut off the pointed end, carefully hollow out the insides. Thread a darning needle with a piece of cord and pass it through the top of the carrot basket. Then knot the two ends of cord together so as to form a means of hanging the carrot basket on the wall. (Be sure to select a warm place such as a kitchen or sun-porch). Fill the basket with water and in a week or so, the bottom will sprout beautiful lacy-green leaves. Continue keeping it filled with water and soon it will be covered with climbing foliage, thus causing a humble carrot to become a dainty hanging-basket.

HIDE-AND-SEEK ON THE HEARTHRUG

One of the players is counted out to go and hide, but, without leaving the circle, thinks of some good place in which it may be supposed he or she is hiding. Having called 'Cuckoo!" the others begin guessing one spot after another until the right one is hit upon, when the guesser hides in turn. In such a game the hiding ground may be anywhere in the world: "A street in Paris," or "The top of Pike's Peak." Each player takes it in turn to ask questions as to the whereabouts and nature of hiding place; but as the one who is answering may only say "Yes" or "No," give some idea of the place. For example they will naturally ask whether it is far or near, high or low, and so on.

GEMS FROM THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

1. The Story of the Days—Part 4. And now we must peep into the room of Mr. and Mrs. Day's eldest son, Master Tues Day. You observe that he has only one hand, and the story of how he lost his other hand is the story of how he came by his name.

The Norsemen had a god of war named Tyr, and when a terrible wolf-spirit, named Fenris, had to be captured, because he was troubling the whole earth, it was Tyr who undertook the dangerous venture. The spirits of the mountains had made a chain out of the hardest things in the world to find—the footsteps of a cat, the beards of women, the roots of stones, the breath of fishes, the nerves of bears, and the spittle of birds. This strange chain could not be broken, and with it Fenris was to be bound.

But Fenris would not allow even this soft-looking chain to be put round his neck, and said he would only suffer it if the gods would promise to take it off again, and would send a god to put his hand in the wolf's mouth. Tyr was the only god brave enough to volunteer. He put his hand in the mouth of Fenris, and Fenris was bound; then, in his rage at being captured, he bit off the hand of the god. It is curious that the French name for Tuesday is Mardi—that it is the day of Mars, who was also a god like the Norseman's Tyr, who gives is Tyr's Day, or Tuesday.

II. Questions And Answers:

Question: What is it that makes us hungry?

Answer: We have had many questions about animals which we have answered by saying that animals know things by instinct, and now we come to one or two questions about human beings which we know very much in the same way. No one needs to tell us when we are hungry. We know quite well without being told. It is one of the few instincts that human beings have. Even a baby knows when it is hungry. It is a fortunate thing that the cells of which our bodies are made have this power of making their wants known to us. As soon as there is too little food in the body, it means that the blood has not enough nourishment in it. There is a sinking feeling in the pit of the stomach, and it is this feeling which we call hunger. This is one of the few things that a human being knows without having to learn it.

POEMS EVERY CHILD SHOULD READ

SOAP

By Burges Johnson

The folks at my house half the time,
Are thinking about dirt,
It sort of gives them horrors,
And they act as if it hurt.
The sight of just a little Makes them daffy as can be—
They're always washing something,
And half the time it's me.

It isn't because I wet my feet,
That gives me colds and such;
'Taint running round that keeps me thin,
It's 'cause I'm washed so much.
It does no good to tell them,
They're so stubborn, but I hope
That some day they'll discover
What deceitful stuff is soap.

I tell you, very often when my Hands was clean and white,
I've gone along to wash them,
'Cause it did no good to fight.
When I've stuck 'em in the basin
It was plain enough to see
That the soap would make the water
Just as dirty as could be.

If folks would give me half a chance,
With soap that didn't cheat,
I guess they'd be surprised to find
I'm naturally quite neat.
I'd take on flesh and leave off having Colds and such, I know.
And no one could complain about

OUR INTERESTING ALPHABET FOR CHILDREN

F

F stands for France, that beautiful European country, and also for the polite, considerate, and friendly French people. Oh, and here's something that will be sure to interest you! Do you know, boys and girls, that many French-studying pupils in our United tSates Schools are starting to write letters to English-studying pupils of France, as part of their classwork? One of the letters received from a sixteen year old French girl by a little Pittsburgh girl is as follows:

My Dear Miss: Excuse me, if I write to you, but a friend, of yours have give to me your address. If you have nothing against, I shall writte to you regularly, and you in like manner. How many years have you if I dare to ask for? I am 16 years old; if you sent your photography in your next letter, I sent also my photograhpy. I were very happy if you will correspond with I. In waiting for a favorable answer, I sent you my friendship.

A future friend,
JEANNE ———
Wintzenheim.

Considering the difficulties in our language, don't you think Jeanne did very well? I am sure that she, too, has many laughs over the letters sent to her written in an American schoolgirl's French.

15,000 Actors Are Hunting Work Along Broadway

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Fifteen thousand actors are tramping Broadway vainly seeking for employment, most of them with unpaid board bills and many of them hungry, the theatrical weekly "Variety" estimated today after a tareful survey.

So desperate has the situation become that a joint committee representing managers and actors has been formed to try to alleviate the situation.

Of the out-of-works, 10,000 are of the legitimate stage and 5,000 are vaudeville performers.

William A. Brady, representing managers, and Frank Gilmore, representing the Actors' Equity Association, began today to try to work out some plan by which at least a good proportion of the unemployed actors may be given work.

One form of their activity will be to negotiate wage agreements with musicians and stage hands in provincial towns. They hold that their wages are prohibitive in many cities and that it is impossible for managers to send out road companies which formerly employed thousands of actors.

The situation is complicated just now because many of the actors and actresses had temporary Christmas jobs, just over, as Santa Clauses and shop hands.

Lady's Health Was Terrible After Stroke

Was In Despair, But Famous Ten Herbs Ended Her Ailments

"Since taking Ten Herbs, my health is better than it has been for a very long time," was the recent statement of Mrs. Mattie Turney, 636 South Main street, Greensburg, to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at Eckerd's of New

MRS. MATTIE TURNEY

Castle, Inc., 30 East Washington St., New Castle, where he is daily demonstrating this famous herbal medicine.

"About six months ago I suffered a stroke, which was the second one I have had," continued Mrs. Turney, who is 71 years of age. "It left me in a terrible run-down, nervous condition. I also was troubled with my stomach. Gas formed and caused belching and pains. Sometimes bits of sour food would come up in my throat, due to indigestion. Headaches and dizzy spells came on me. I suffered continually with pains in my back. Constipation made it necessary for me to keep taking physics. Being nervous, I was irritable, and my sleep was so broken that I never felt rested. I was beginning to believe that I would never have even fair health again.

"After reading about Ten Herbs in the newspapers, I started taking your medicine, although I had little faith in it, as I had tried many different kinds of medicines without getting much relief. I am glad to say that I was wonderfully surprised at the good results Ten Herbs gave me in a short time. My appetite is very good now, and I can eat anything without suffering with pains or gas afterwards. Headaches and dizzy spells have disappeared. The pains in my back have been relieved. Constipation has been overcome. My nerves are in fine condition, and I enjoy restful sleep. I have more energy. I am pleased to recommend Ten Herbs to others."

Ten Herbs has been a blessing to many men and women in this section by giving them relief from disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. This medicine also has a surprising tonic and cleasing effect.

The Ten Herbs Man is at the Eckerd's of New Castle, Inc., 30 East Washington street, New Castle, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine.

Hail Liquor Buying Decision As Important Step In Enforcement

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Phohibition officials today declared that the decision of Federal Judge Kirkpatrick of Philadelphia in holding a purchaser of liquor in violation of the volstead act was one of the most important steps in effective prohibition enforcement since the adoption of the eighteenth amendment.

This was one of the first cases on record where a purchaser has been held guilty of buying from a bootlegger. Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran declared that if this interpretation of the law is followed in other districts bootlegging will be delivered a powerful blow.

Norris was arrested following a raid on his exclusive New York apartment while his daughter, the wife of a Romanian nobleman, was entertaining. Liquor to have been brought from Kerper was seized.

When the New Yorker was brought to trial, Frederic Ballard, his counsel, asserted the government had singled out his client from among "51,000,000 purchasers of liquor in this country." It was merely an intimation of what might happen to the other millions, he charged, if Norris was convicted.

Beware of Diets to reduce

Medical authorities warn that reducing has gone too far

MEDICAL authorities are becoming alarmed at the extent to which American girls, women and men are reducing their weight by starvation diets. This has gone too far, they say, and in many cases is resulting in permanent injury.

One famous doctor says: "Starving leads to anemia, which may become so persistent that the tissues are no longer able to form blood in the proper way, even when sufficient food is subsequently supplied to them, and a state of actual starvation throughout life may result." "This," he goes on to say, "is because any method which defeats nature, long carried out, produces disease changes in the body which frequently become permanent."

Another error is the belief by some that sugar in the diet is the only cause of overweight. This is not true. Any food that is nourishing is fattening and nature should be allowed to store a certain amount of fat in the tissues as a reserve supply of energy when it is needed. Don't undereat; it is dangerous. Eat enough of a great variety of foods and enjoy them. Remember that nothing adds so much enjoyment to other foods as sugar. Sweetness is nature's ideal flavor and modern sugar is food in its least expensive form. Put one cup of sugar in the water used for boiling ham and notice the improvement in appetizing flavor. Be sure of tasteful variety in food. The Sugar Institute.

Cook's Forest Is Purchased

State Now Owns Big Forest Of Virgin Timber Land Near Clarion

(Special To The News)

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 28.—Cook's Forest, in Forest, Clarion and Jefferson counties, is now owned by the state of Pennsylvania. Secretary of Forests and Waters Charles E. Dorworth announced on Thursday that the purchase had been completed and that this 6,000 acres of virgin white pine, the last of its kind in the state, had come under the control of his department.

The forest will be developed into a state park, a beauty spot and a breathing place for the entire state for generations to come. Large, stately pines raise their heads to the skies in Cook's Forest, a delight to the tourist and the last vestige of the wonderful pine tracts in this state years ago.

Partly Appropriated

In the session of 1927 the General Assembly appropriated $650,000 for the purchase of Cook's Forest, providing $200,000 would be raised by private subscription. This was done and then came the necessity of getting all the Cook heirs to transfer their rights to the forest. This took time, but all of the details have been completed, the money has been paid in and Cook's Forest is now a Pennsylvania state park.

The act of Assembly authorizing the purchase of this tract states that "it is for the purpose of preserving and perpetrating a portion of the original forests of Pennsylvania, particularly of the Conifer family now largely extinct, in the interest of wholesome outdoor recreation, and the study and enjoyment of the same for the people of the commonwealth for forestry conservation and preservation and maintenance of distinctive natural views and conditions."

The dedication will be postponed until next spring, when weather conditions are more favorable.

London Merchant Wants Newspaper

Ambition Of Gordon Selfridge, Once Of Wisconsin, Is Journalistic

(International News Service)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The ambition of Gordon Selfridge, who came from Wisconsin to become London's greatest merchant, is to own a newspaper.

He divulged his aim at a luncheon of the London Master Printers' Association held here recently.

"At the age of 12, I joined with a friend of mine in the editing of a monthly paper in America, which we called 'The Will o' the Wisp,'" Selfridge declared. "He was the editor and I was business manager. I got the advertisements, and we made such a good thing of it that at the end of the year my friend and I got enough money to visit Niagara Falls.

"If any of you have a good newspaper you want to sell at a very low price I shall be pleased to take it over or talk the matter over with you."

Queer Gooseberry Fruits In Winter

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Dec. 28. — There is a strange plant on the shores of Lake Miccousukee that "knows its berries" about the business of being unconventional.

It is described by Dr. Herman Kurz, biologist at Florida State College for Women, as a specimen of wild gooseberry belonging to a hardy northern family. Instead of following the usual custom of gooseberry bushes, this stranger in a tropical land sheds its leaves in summer and puts on green foliage in winter.

Dr. Kurz believes its trouble in deciding what to do with a torrid southern summer is caused by its custom of reproducing in the cooler parts of the year.

Eskimo Girl Gives Life To Save 75

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 28. — Word reached here today of a pre-Christmas tragedy in which Anna Yukluk, 22, an Eskimo, sacrificed her life to save 75 other girls from danger of fire at the United States Bureau of Education Industrial School at Dillingham, Southern Alaska.

The young woman, a cook, was burned Saturday morning when gasoline exploded while she was filling a lamp. Suffering from her own burns she broke a glass door and threw the can of blazing gasoline outside. Two of the 75 girls sleeping in the dormitory were awakened by the explosion and put out the fire with extinguishers.

Anna died the next day.

On gaining entrance, the thief or thieves had knocked off the knob on the door of the safe in an effort to get into it. An old spring had been used in trying to force the safe.

Nothing was secured for their efforts.

The Way OF THE World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE KID BROTHER

Don't despise the kid brother of the family. A Chicago university psychologist has spent two years investigating families with the idea of finding out who's who. He finds the oldest child is frequently less intelligent than the youngest, though there are plenty of exceptions. Dr. Thurstone also says the youngest child seems to have less tendency toward insanity and the ordinary run or diseases.

Perhaps the most important thing brought out in this investigation is the fact that the level of intelligence in children of small families is higher than that in large families. There seems to be no good reason why population should increase, for the sake of mere numbers.

A Cleveland woman, less than 30 years old, tried to kill her three children and commit sucide not long ago, after giving up the struggle to support herself and them. Poverty was too much for her.

"I went everywhere for help and the grave seemed the only place for me to go with my children if I wanted to be happy with them, she said.

Part of her misery may have been her own fault and part of it may have come from her ignorance of places where she might have turned for help. But there is more to be said. She must have found a certain hardness in the world that thousands never come up against and can little understand. There is too much grief for us ever to forget to be compassionate. There are natural handicaps enough in this world without having them added to by the hardness of human beings.

THE HANGMAN

Since 1888 Karl Gold, executioner of Hungary, had hanged 130 men. He died a few days ago. What strange and interesting philosophy of life had this man built up within him? His business was to give the death blow to failures. Did he still believe in the capacity of the average human to win in the game of life? But Karl Gold's work was not so important. The death blow to the wretched creatures he executed had been struck probably by themselves, long before.

FARMS ANF FARMERS

We may worry some about farmers but we need not worry about what can be done on farms. In 1917 there were 35,000 wheat farmers in Montana. In 1928 there are only 14,000. So great has been the increase in the use of tractors and other large scale machinery that the 14,000 farmers are tilling more acres and doing it better than did the 35,000. There are still comfortable prospects that we shall have food for some time.

Lives Of Ape Men In Forest Pictured

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Ancient Pithecanthropus Erectus the "Ape Man of Java" whose fossil remains started a world discussion nearly 40 years ago as to whether he was "the missing link" now is classified as probably a great mischief maker.

This trait in the high light of a reconstruction of P. Erectus's capabilities by W. D. Matthew, professor of Paleontology of the University of California in "Natural History" publication of the American Museum here.

Drawing what he says is frankly an imaginary picture Prof. Matthew describes the ape men as six feet tall, upright, broad shouldered, their gleaming brown skin half concealed by sparse black hair a covering "scanty for a beast—too heavy to seem quite human."

"The prominent eyebrows" he says "form a heavy dark shelf shadowing deep-set eyes and the powerful, projecting muzzle is nearly as big and heavy is in a gorilla".

Prof. Matthew pictures them stoning tigers, elephants and rhinoceroses escaping the animals charges by leaping into trees and actually driving away the four-footed creatures all in a spirit of combined curiosity and devilment.

The skull cap a couple of teeth and a thigh bone are the remains on which this picture is built. The indicated heavy jaws probably owe their size to use in beraking nuts which suggests a vegetarian diet. The skull cap definitely belongs to an anthropoid intermediate between the higher apes and man he says.

The creatures in some respects probably was nearer to man in others to one or another of the great apes with some pecularities of his own, Prof. Matthew says.

DULY CAUTIONED

The master of the house went into the kitchen and informed the cook that his wife's aunt was coming on an indefinite visit.

"I've made out a list of all her favorite dishes for you," he said.

"Yes sir," replied the cook.

"And," he added, "the first time you serve one of these you're fired!" —The Housekeeper.

Berlin Broadcasts Wireless Pictures On Daily Schedule

Receiving Sets For Project Are Retained By Firms And Individuals

(International News Service)

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—With the successful broadcasting of President von Hindenburg's latest picture Germany inaugurated a regular wireless picture broadcasting service.

This service however is till in an experimental stage because the radio companies have not yet had much experience with this youngest branch of modern radio science. The pictures are broadcast to all partipants from the powerful station of Koenigswusterhausen near Berlin on a wave length of 1640 meters.

To inaugurate the service the Government Radio company supplied about 50 picture receiving sets to interested firms and private individuals in practically all parts of the country. These were requested to send in the pictures received together with detailed reports about their impressions and experiences with these apparatus.

The German telephone service is made on the Fulton system and has shown very excellent results even in this experimental stage. The pictures of President von Hindenburg and Post Minister Dr. Schaetzel, broadcast on the firse day were equally well received by all stations in Germany as well as in Vienna and London. The program of this telephoto service will gradually be expanded. It is planned to broadcast actual news photos of daily events. The police will take advantage of this innovation to send warrants and pictures of wanted criminals, etc.

Dies "Poor", But Leaves $5,709

Woman Had Hidden Costly New Goods In Her Home In Ohio

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Dec. 23.—Appraisers of the estate of the late Miss Carrie Hayes, 70, telephone operator at Barnesville who sent out the first word of the disaster of the dirigible Shenandoah several years ago have found so much concealed wealth in her home that it will take them all this week to put a value on all the property.

The aged night operator of the Barnesville exchange who never seemed to have any money and lived alone in a little one-story four-room house actually had $5,700 on deposit in Barnesville banks and dividend checks from stock valued at $1,000 have been found in the house.

Last week Miss Hayes was reported missing. Neighbors broke into the house and found the woman dead. Authorities said she died of exposure.

After the funeral appraisers began their work and to their amazement found piles of new clothing, stacks of cosmetics, candy and other merchandise concealed about the house.

Under carpets in one room they came upon 20 suits of underwear, dresses, handkerchiefs and other wearing apparel, 20 yards of fine silks, 100 boxes of face powder a dozen bottles of choice perfumes and 14 pounds of chocolate bars.

They also came upon her bank books showing the large amount of savings in the banks and near the books were stock certificates and dividend checks.

Her sister Ida Hayes is confined in Columbus State hospital and recently a man told the appraisers Carrie asked him for money with which she could buy candy to send to her sister.

COUNCIL SETS TAX MILLAGE

Measure Is Presented At Session At City Hall This Morning

Members of council in session in city hall today amended an ordinance designating a tax levy for 1929 by which the tax rate will be 10 1-2 mills for genral revenue instead of 10 1-4 as designated when council introduced the measure Monday. This increases the tax levy 1-4 mill over council's first plan and actually makes an increase of one and one-fourth mill over the rate of 1928 when the levy was 11 3-4 mills.

The levy for 1929 is divided as follows: General revenue 10 1-2 mills; sinking fund, 2 mills and library 1-2 mill.

The ordinance after being amended was reported from committee and sent to the printing office from which it was withdrawn today.

It was discovered it was said that councilmen had not made sufficient appropriations for the care of bridges Councilman Reeves said Gardner avenue viaduct must be painted and new abuttments made to Boyles avenue bridge.

The Gardner avenue viaduct painting it is said will cost approximately $7,500 and has been recommended, owing to the scaling of the paint and rust which is causing damage.

DEATH lurks in the closed garage. Do you realize that carbon monoxide gas is just as deadly as any war gas ever invented? It strikes hard—and without warning. The deadly fumes come from your auto exhaust and when you close the garage doors to give the old engine a chance to warm up you are dicing with death. The National Safety Council reports show the usual number of these tragic cases this winter. Here's an unseen hazard that is deadly. Avoid it by keeping your garage doors open while your engine is running.

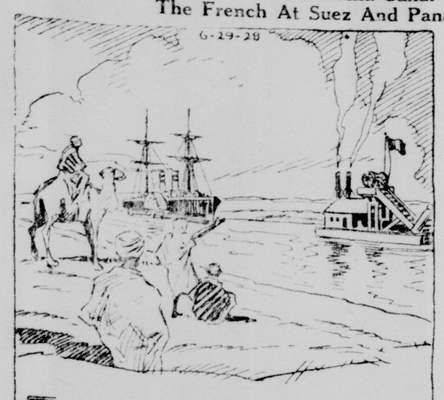
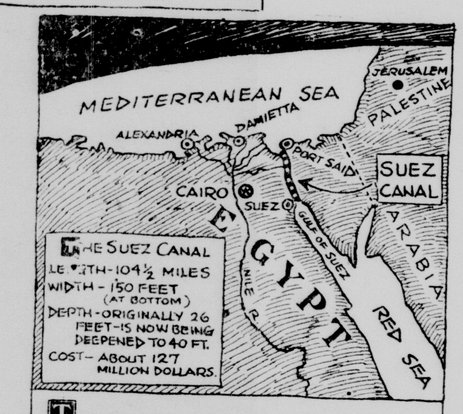
The French At Suez And Panama.



IN 1869 A FRENCH COMPANY, HEADED BY THE FAMOUS ENGINEER, FERDINAND DE LESSEPS, COMPLETED THE SUEZ CANAL CONNECTING THE MEDITERRANEAN WITH THE RED SEA.



THE CANAL OFFERED A DIRECT ROUTE BY SEA FROM EUROPE TO INDIA AND THE FAR EAST, ELIMINATING THE LONG VOYAGE AROUND THE CONTINENT OF AFRICA.

HAVING ACCOMPLISHED THIS FEAT, DE LESSEPS SOUGHT TO DUPLICATE IT IN AMERICA. HE PICKED THE ISTHMUS OF PANAMA AS THE BEST ROUTE FOR AN INTER-OCEAN CANAL, AND SOON A FRENCH COMPANY WAS ORGANIZED, WITH DE LESSEPS IN CONTROL, TO UNDERTAKE THE PROJECT.

THE FRENCH COMPANY TOOK OVER THE GRANT TO A RIGHT OF WAY ACROSS PANAMA WHICH WYSE, A FRENCH ENGINEER, HAD SECURED FROM THE COLOMBIAN GOVERNMENT IN 1878, AND THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE CANAL WAS BEGUN IN 1883.

New Castle High To Play Alumni Tonight

First Game Of Year At Senior High Gymnasium

New Castle High Basketball Team To Pry Off 1928-29 Lid Tonight; Benefit Game

GAME IS CALLED FOR EIGHT O'CLOCK

By "BUGS" WALTHER

TONIGHT at 8 o'clock, in the revamped Senior High gymnasium the New Castle High school basketball team will open their 1928-29 independent floor schedule by opposing the Alumni quintet. The game will be played as a benefit for the Alumni Athletic Association.

The New Castle passers opened their season last Friday at Altoona High by upsetting the Altoona team, 24 to 14, in an interesting fray. Last night the locals played Harding High at Aliquippa and put up a great game. The red and black tossers are on edge tonight for their meeting with the "friendly enemies", we will call them.

Line-Up Announced

Coach Philip H. Bridenbaugh has put the locals through several stiff practice sessions this week and announces them as fit and ready for a tough struggle tonight. The same line-up that started the Altoona game will likely be started against the Alumni, with Cuba and Johnson at the forwards, Alexander at center and Captain Ostrosky and Sillman at the guards. The reserves to be carried by the coach tonight are: Hannon, McAuley, McIntosh, Weir, Vago and Ciccone.

The New Castle team will appear tonight in their new spic-and-span uniforms of black satin with big red letters. The boys presented a natty appearance at Altoona, according to Ralph Gardner.

The Alumni team, under the direction of Andy Hartman, former New Castle High star and Grove City College passer, will present a formidable line-up. The Alumni boys have held several practice sessions and also many of them played at the Y. M. C. A. in the Collegian-Rick Motors game, and they are in good condition for the game tonight. The Alumni boys are confident of giving the Senior High team a real tussle.

Alumni Team Strong

On the Alumni team will be found such well-known floor luminaries as Paul Reider, Bruce Franklin, "Baldy" McGrath, "Len" Friedman, Harry Robinson, Clarence Klaber, Walt Sumner, Ralph Day, "Sid" Lockley, "Tom" Connelly, Johnny Kraft, John Soyring, Andy Hartman, Glenn Thomas, Clark McClelland, Mike Kulich, Nolte and several others.

The start of a new basketball campaign here finds New Castle a "team without a league". It is an act of fate that a team that in 1926-27 carried off W. P. I. A. L. honors and were runners-up to Duquesne for the schoolboy honors in western Pennsylvania, should find themselves out in the cold this season. Ostracised from the league for a mere technicality.

Faculty Manager Ralph Gardner has arranged a snappy independent program for the New Castle High team, with about 12 home games and 10 away. When the league moguls up and declared that New Castle High was unable to play their Section III schedule this year, due to a suspension, Gardner immediately got busy on the wires, and before many days had passed was swamped by basketball teams desiring to schedule the locals.

Chairman William "Bill" Connery of the Alumni is very enthusiastic about this game tonight and safely predicts that over a thousand will jam their way into the Senior High gym floor to witness the inauguration of the new season.

Treasury Is Bent

The Alumni treasury is "badly bent" as the saying goes, and they hope that by means of the New Castle-Alumni floor game tonight they can write a few more checks.

Season tickets for basketball were placed on sale Thursday and quite a few were sold. The tickets are selling for $7.50 each. Gardner arranged to sell in the neighborhood of 150 reserved seats. The newly renovated Senior High gym will seat about 1,500 and it is freely predicted that there will not be many vacant seats by game time tonight.

New York-Illinois Boxing Commissions Are Now In Accord

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The New York State Boxing commission and the Illinois Boxing commission have reached an agreement whereby the decisions of one body will be respected by the other, according to James A. Farley, one of New York's three boxing commissioners.

Under the agreement which has been approved by the boxing commissioners of both states, a fighter or a manager suspended in New York will be unable to ply his trade in Illinois and vica-versa.

Basketball Fans To Use New Entrances At High Gymnasium

The basketball fans attending the New Castle-Alumni game at Senior High school tonight will use two new entrances that have been established with the revamping of the gymnasium.

Heretofore the fans have utilized the main gate on Lincoln avenue, where only one entrance was available. Tonight the two new entrances will be located off of Reis street, and right in front of the new addition to the Senior High building. The entrances are now on the southern side of the Senior High building.

The ticket window will be located a few feet from the top of the concrete steps leading into the gymnasium. The change in entrances was necessitated by the placing of more bleachers directly in front of where the two old entrances were located. The new seating arrangement at Senior High gym gives about 1,500 fans an opportunity of viewing the games in comfort.

Here And There In Sports' Land

By ED. FRITZ

Jack Sharkey of Boston has signed to fight Young Stribling in a ten round bout to be staged at Miami, Fla., February 26.

The winner of tonight's Hudkins-Devos bout at New York will be matched to fight Mickie Walker for the 160 pound crown.

Mrs. John Hertz, Chicago, has sent her big red colt, Reigh Count to England to race in the Ascot Gold cup event June 17.

The city council of Boston has unanimously passed the Sunday sports bill which means the Braves and Red Sox will play ball on Sunday.

A. Kippax and H. Booker playing for New South Wales against Victoria at Melbourne scored 207 runs which is a new record for cricket.

Dazzy Vance led the National league pitchers in effectiveness. He permitted an earned run average of 2.09. Grimes won 25 games.

Grover Whalen, police commissioner, New York has introduced boxing in the department. Hereafter gangsters may feel a heavy sock on the jaw.

Next month officials of the New Castle Baseball club will name officers for 1929. Baseball plans will also be outlined by directors.

Floor Games At "Y" On Thursday

The Y. M. C. A. basketball floor was a very busy place on Thursday afternoon and evening. Seven basketball games were played at the local institution during the day. Some of the games were played in conjunction with the New Castle-Butler "Y" meet.

The New Castle Midgets defeated the Butler "Y" Midgets 20 to 19 in a thrilling and hard fought game. Smith was the big star. The New Castle team under 18 years of age defeated the Butler team 22 to 21, in a game that was hard fought in all periods. The New Castle team under 16 years of age defeated the Butler quintet 26 to 21. Johns was the featured player with six baskets.

The Indians defeated the Mahoningtown five 19 to 11 in a good game. The Orioles defeated East Brook 18 to 7. The Acmes defeated the Kandy Kids of Wampum 21 to 19. Pollack caged seven baskets to be high scorer of this game.

Butler Outclassed

The New Castle Hi-Y quintet hung a 40 to 22 defeat on the Butler Hi-Y team in the feature game on the program. The New Castle boys were far superior to the Butlerites in all departments of the game. At the end of the first half the locals had a lead of 25 to 5 over Butler. McLaughlin, Pollack, and Mancine led the attack for the New Castle team, by caging eleven baskets between them.

Seyler the Butler center ran wild in the final two periods of the game and caged seven baskets to give his team a good showing. Pollack and Mancine led the attack for New Castle in the last half.

The summary:

New Castle Hi-Y 40		Butler Hi-Y 22
McLaughlin	F	Kiester
Pollack	F	Wolfgong
Mancine	C	Seyler
Johns	G	Mortland
McGoun	G	Marshall

Subs—Butler: Crawford. New Castle: Garvin, Lockley, Hoose. Field goals—Wolfgong, Seyler 7, McLaughlin 5, Pollack 7, Mancine 6, Johns. Fouls—Butler 6 out of 14. New Castle 2 out of 3. Referee—Kirker.

New Castle High School Basketball Team Runs Into Tartar In Aliquippa

HARDEN-LIPPE ARE FEATURE PLAYERS

(Special To The News)

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., Dec. 28.—New Castle high school basketball team was defeated here last night by Harding High, by a score of 22 to 17, in a hard fought floor engagement. The Aliquippa team proved too strong for the Lawrence Countians.

Play was extremely close in the first period of the game, with New Castle securing but two points, while Harding High scored three. The New Castle team failed to show their customary stride and at the end of the first half were trailing 8 to 4. Cuba kept the Bridenbaugh team from a shutout in the first two sessions by caging four straight fouls. The Harding High guards, Lippe and Reibick, put up a stiff defense and kept their basket untouched.

Two-Man Team.

Aliquippa's two-man team, Harden and Lippe, secured all of the points scored by the Harding High team in the first half of the game. Harden tallied three baskets and Lippe caged two fouls. Incidently it was this same pair that tallied all of the points except one foul for Harding High. Harden had four baskets and Lippe had a like number.

The score at the end of the third quarter was 16 to 8, in favor of Aliquippa. New Castle played better basketball in the fourth and final quarter scoring 9 points to 7 for Aliquippa. Ostrosky led the New Castle team with two baskets in the last half, while Cuba and Alexander each had a basket.

The Aliquippa team played a fine brand of basketball and deserved the victory over the highly touted New Castle quintet. New Castle used practically the same lineup last night that won the Sectional III honors in the W. P. I. A. L. last year, but the old pep and dash was missing.

The summary:—

New Castle 17		Aliquippa 22
Johnson	F	Jones
Cuba	F	Harden
Alexander	C	Miller
Sillman	G	Reibick
Ostrosky	G	Lippe

Subs: New Castle: Hannon. Field Goals—Cuba, Alexander, Ostrosky 2, Harden 4, Lippe 4. Fouls—New Castle, 9 out of 12; Aliquippa, 6 out of 7. Referee—"Beggs" Snyder.

California Team Ready For Battle

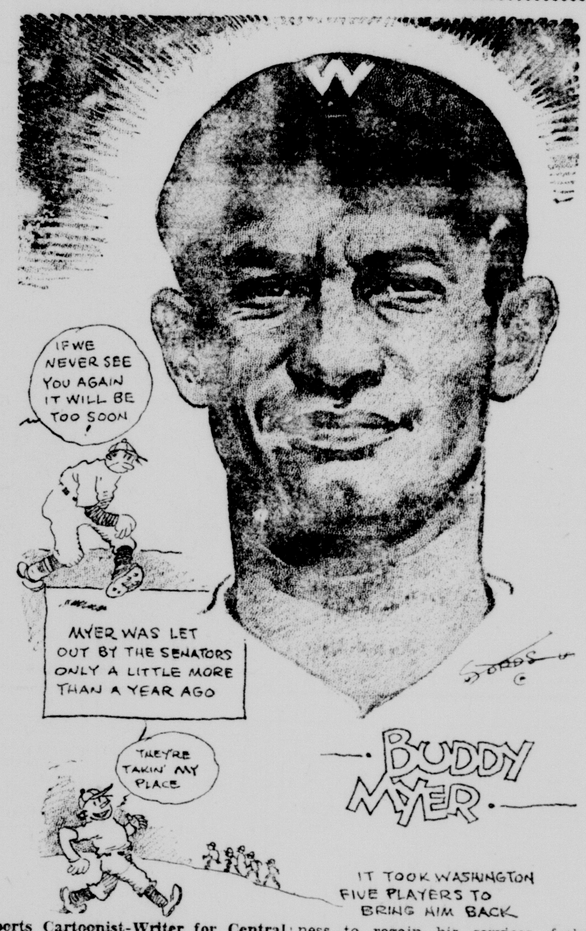
(International News Service)

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 28.—"Nibs" Price, the little Napoleon determined to clinch supremacy for the western football empire, today declared himself so satisfied with the way his California Bears are shaping up for the New Year's day tussle with Georgia Tech that hereafter his charges will have only one workout a day until game time.

The modern is efficient, but he can't annoint his whiskers with turpentine and lard to cure a cold in the chest.

SORDS POINTS

Made Senators See Their Mistake



Sports Cartoonist-Writer for Central Press and The New Castle News

Not the least important of the deals that marked the winter baseball season thus far was the trade that brought Infielder Buddy Myer back to the Washington Senators from the Boston Red Sox.

Myer hit .304 with Washington in 1926. His fielding, too, was fair enough. But in May, 1927, the Senators suddenly became dissatisfied and traded him to the Red Sox for Topper Rigney. This apparently made Myer sore and he set out determined to show the Capital city team what a big mistake they made. His fine record of last season and the fact that Washington, in their eagerness to regain his services, forked over five players, shows how well he succeeded.

Horace Lisenbee and Milton Gaston, pitchers; Bob Reeves and Grant Gillis, infielders, and Outfielder Elliott Bigelow comprise the quintet of players that went to Boston for Myer. Bigelow, a hard hitter, was with Birmingham last year. He literally burned up the Southern league.

Myer started his professional career with the Cleveland Indians in 1925, coming direct from the Mississippi A. and M. college from where he was graduated. The Indians immediately shunted him off to New Orleans, who sold him in the fall of the same year to Washington.

Hudkins-De Vos Battle Tonight

Middleweight Scrappers Ready For Hectic Battle In New York City

By DAVIS J. WALSH
Sports Editor International News Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Taking the matter into custody purely on suspicion, it would seem that out of ten rounds of candid violence between Ace Hudkins and Rene De Vos at Madison Square Garden tonight must emerge the new middleweight champion of the world. This statement obviously won't stand alone, in view of the fact that Mickey Walker is the old, the new and, in fact, the present middleweight champion; one, therefore, must come bounding gladly out from the players' bench with a couple of substitute legs and here they are:

First, the prevalent belief that Walker cannot again go to the scales with 160 pounds and come away, unabashed. He last tried it six months ago in Chicago and, if he didn't blow up in the final six rounds that night, then I'm going down to Wall Street and wait for the next explosion to jolt me forward off my heels.

Second, that Walker hasn't licked either of tonight's principals and probably won't.

Expect Knockout New Year's Day

Defeat Will Mean Disappearance Of Either Dillon Or Firpo

EVERY BOUT CAN BE TERMED "NATURAL"

Jack Dillon, Nashville "surprise package" trotted four rounds yesterday with Joe Dinger at Jolly Bowl, walloped a "dummy" for more frames then skipped rope for two rounds after which he called it a day's work well done in anticipation of his second go with Henry Firpo here New Year's afternoon.

"Mr. Firpo will find me in the best of condition when he makes another attempt to knock me from my pins and now that I have established myself I want fans to come over Tuesday and watch me knock Firpo like a flat hat. He's been reaping a harvest of coin here and it is money I'm after.

Hopes To Toss K. O.

"If I can knock Firpo like a piece of ice I'm setting pretty in this splendid little city and I'll have not to worry for future engagements" said the Nashville exponent of criss-cross offense and defense as he wended his way to the Leslie.

And that is just that, as Dillion said. If he can put Firpo to sleep, it appears as though some time in the future Floyd Hybert will be brought back to town to cavort with Mr. Dillon.

There is one thing sure. Firpo must flatten Dillon or Dillon cool Firpo with a knockout. The boy who is knocked out will probably disappear from the Jolly Bowl for sometime. Fight fans have four "naturals" and no better card could have been booked. In fact the boy who loses out may find himself out in the cold for many future shows.

Are Bitter Rivals

Frankie Rio and U. S. Carpentier meet in the semi-final of six rounds. There has been considerable talk of Rio having got a decision he didn't deserve. Only a portion of fandom says that. Naturally the other half roots for Rio.

Tuesday the issue will be settled. They'll "step into it" and let their hardest fly. They always have but as one may disappear from the bowl it looks as though there'll be lots of fighting.

Joe Midway hasn't fought here for some time. He trotted five rounds with the Louisvillian. Nick Martin went five with Jack Dillon. This makes Joe and Nick about even.

They are middleweights. Midway recently stopped a foe at the Bowl. Martin knocked out a Palooka named Miller. They are hard punchers and the winner will remain in the good graces of Promoter Jolly.

The four light-heavyweights should toss a lot of punches and like in the other bouts two of them will be eliminated. Elmo will battle Tom Farrow and Nick Polis will strut with Warren Farrow.

The have featured many of the preliminaries with no knockouts. However, Tuesday afternoon to start their 1929 fight year right they'll have to produce a knockout to satisfy fans.

New Years' Day Open House At Local Y. M. C. A.

New Year's day is to be known as open house day at the New Castle Y. M. C. A., it was announced today by the management of the local institution.

All teams outside of the Y. M. C. A. circles will have free access to the gym floor during the afternoon. All teams desiring to utilize the "Y" court during next Tuesday afternoon are asked to get in touch with either Walter Kirker or Henry MacNicholas. Teams using the floor must be organized boys' teams and scheduled with some other boys' team in their class. It is expected that quite a number of teams throughout the city will take the opportunity of playing at the Y. M. C. A. floor.

WHEN TECH'S BACKS CRASH 'EM

Plenty of fight is promised for California when the Golden Bears and Golden Tornado clash at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's day. Paving Way for the Rah-Rahs

By QUIN HALL.

HOCKEY fans are watching the progress made by Myles Lane, collegiate defense man of the New York Rangers, with special interest. The ability shown on the ice by the former Dartmouth star and the manner in which he hooks up with the other Rangers may have considerable bearing on the future of many more college luminaries who are anxious to take up hockey in a professional way.

Col. John S. Hammond, president of the Rangers, and Lester Patrick, the manager, took a chance on putting Lane against the veterans of the professional game despite the fact that he played brilliantly at Dartmouth. So far they have not regretted the move and Patrick has stated publicly that if he can't make a first-class player out of Lane he is willing to take a back seat—and Mr. Patrick is not thinking of leaving the ice sport for a number of years yet.

Lane got his big chance in a hurry and grew from a substitute to a young man with a lot of responsibilities almost overnight. With Ching Johnson out of the game for three months with a fractured ankle and with Taffy Abel set on the sidelines with a gashed leg, Lane found himself helping plug the hole left in the Ranger lineup. He was rushed in as a regular against the Boston Bruins in the opening game of the Hub season and it served as quite a night for the youngster, as he hails from Melrose, Mass., and his home town turned out in a body to cheer its sporting son as he made his bow among the Blue Shirts.

Considering his lack of professional experience Myles made a creditable showing during that game and his work, while needing a little polishing, was, nevertheless, thorough and whole-hearted.

Lane's experience on the football field, while he was at Hanover, is sure to be valuable to him in professional hockey. It is true that in his football togs he was playing against youngsters of his own age whereas in hockey he is pitted against grizzled veterans, but he has already shown that he isn't going to be intimidated or scared away by the reputations which have been made by some of the more seasoned players. He has his faults, but he has a world of natural ability and he has confidence in himself without being conceited. He is willing to learn and he grasps things quickly.

There was a little doubt expressed prior to his joining the team as to how he would get along with the rest of the Rangers, but the boys all like him and he is getting along as if he had been traveling with the team for a whole season.

It is apparent that he should have had a little more seasoning before being tossed into the thick of the battle, but circumstances made it necessary for him to jump in and do his stuff and it is now likely that he will be in the front lines for some time to come.

The hockey magnates have always been a trifle wary of flirting with the collegiate stars, but if Lane makes good—and it looks as if he would—these youngsters who are starring in amateur games will find a demand for their services if they care to continue in the sport.

Win (Dink) Palmer, of Yale, is a youngster who is being highly touted as an even better prospect than Lane and while Dink still has another year to go at New Haven some of the magnates already have an eye on him. And Lane's success is sure to help other collegiate stars who are anxious to follow up the ice game.

Royalty of Golf and Tennis

Will the New Year bring a threat to the supremacy of Bobby Jones, the great Atlantan, or Helen Wills, queen of the courts? It is hardly likely. For both are at the peak of their careers, and almost invincible in competition. Here are two striking action photos of these great athletes and, below, the close-ups so well known to the galleries.

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Thursday's closing rally was carried into early trading in the stock market today and prices of the favorite industrial, motor car, copper and specialty stocks climbed 2-5 points.

Instead of starting at a low rate and working up, call money was posted at 12 per cent as a starter, with the prospect of a further increase before the end of the day.

Radio sold up 6 points at 376; Sears Roebuck gained 3½ Montgomery Ward 4; Kennecott Copper 4; General Electric 4½; Atlantic Refining 2½; National Bellas Hess 5. Johns-Manville added 2½ to yesterday's 9-point jump and sold at 196½, exactly 100 points above the price at which it graduated from the curb to the big board a few months ago. Wright Aero gained 6.

Picking up the forward move that was interrupted a week ago, the motor stocks kept step with the advance, Chrysler again providing the leadership. This stock sold above 126 for a 2-point gain; Nash up 2, Hupp 6; Briggs Manufacturing 2 and Willys Overland fractionally higher in active trading.

Erie was again the feature of the rails, with a new 2-point jump to the year's highest price of 72½. Chesapeake & Ohio firmed up on announcement of complete withdrawal of minority opposition to the merging of the road in the Greater Nickel Plate system.

Easton Man Held For Manslaughter

(International News Service)

EASTON, Pa., Dec. 28.—John Goldish, 36, was farmally charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of James Bender, 50, whose body was found in the rear of Goldish's home Sunday night.

Mrs. Goldish was discharged from prison, where she had been held in connection with the crime. The charge was lodged against Goldish after a coroner's jury held he was partly responsible for Bender's death because he failed to render first aid. The dead man had fallen down a stairway in the rear of the Goldish home.

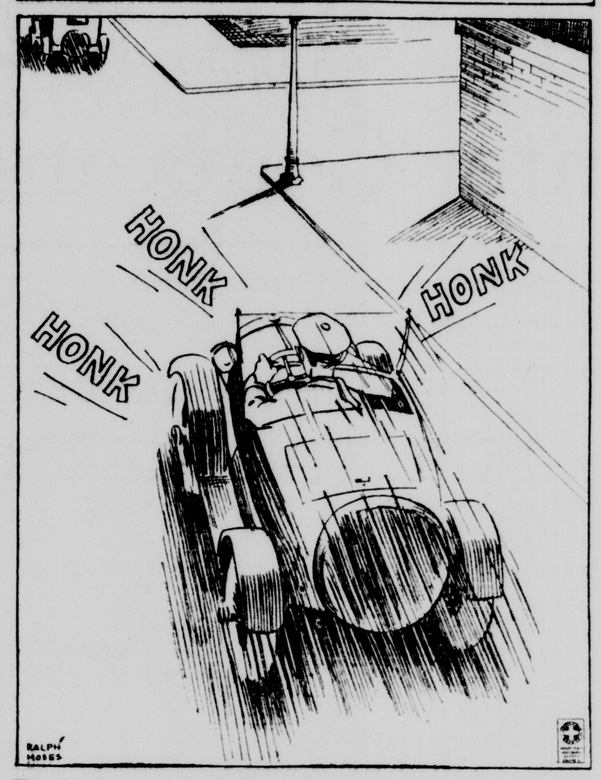
Horn Guarantees Noise—That's All!



DON'T depend too much on your horn. Sure, it's a good old trumpet—loud, terrifying and all that—but it won't necessarily keep you out of the hospital. Often there's another fellow speeding along just around the corner. He may be deaf as a post or he may be pounding his own noise-maker for all its worth, figuring, like yourself, that the right-of-way belongs to the horn-tooter who toots the loudest and longest.

The National Safety Council points out that the auto horn guarantees nothing except noise. Drive slowly—and then you won't have to depend on your tooter.

Servian Bandit Finally Is Hanged

"Black Jovanovic" Dies After Having Received 58 Death Sentences

(International News Service)

BELGRADE, Dec. 28.—"The Black Jovanovic," the bandit chieftain, who was several years terrorizing a part of south Servia, protested against being sentenced for his crimes to 760 years imprisonment besides to be hanged twice. He thought this sentence of the court of Valjevo to be unjust and he appealed to the court of Cassation in Belgrade.

The result of the renewed proceedings has, however, not given him much pleasure. He was sentenced though only to 640 years penal servitude, but on the other hand he was sentenced 58 times to death. He was promptly executed.

Hawaiian Factory Will Make Boards From Sugar Stalks

Dry Fibre Of Sugar Cane Stalks Will Be Made Into Wall Board

(International News Service)

HONOLULU, Dec. 28.—A factory will shortly be erected at Hilo, Hawaii, to make wall board and similar products out of sugar cane bagasse. Bagasse is the dry fiber of the cane stalk left after the juices have been crushed out in the sugar mills. On most of the plantations it is burned as fuel under the mill boilers or hauled to the fields and used as fertilizer.

One plantation on the island of Hawaii has used it for several years past in the manufacture of paper mulch for covering pineapple plants, Hawaiian fashion. The success of this plant has led to the decision to enter manufacture on a larger scale.

Roaming Round With Richards

Some News, Some Views, But Mostly Just Observations Of Interesting Things Around New Castle

Among the merchants this is known as Exchange Week. It's the week when those presents that were received at Christmas time and didn't suit, go back to the store to be exchanged for another size or perhaps another article.

Those size 10 socks that went to big brother have to be replaced by 11½ and that perfectly gorgeous necktie that came in from some maiden aunt will probably be reincarnated in a handful of handkerchieves.

One really should make a list of what he wants for Christmas, giving color, size and number, or perhaps if Christmas gifts were sold on approval it would help. Anything to be a help.

The ladies took a trip over the city last night for the purpose of judging the electrical exhibits, and you needn't envy them their jobs a dime's worth. Grading the exhibits was a job for a Solomon for to go over the entire city and adjudicate each one was a task that took time, and patience.

And like a judge in a beauty contest, if they're right, they're wrong.

Every so often, Wes Davy breaks out with another effusion about those hairy fishes up in Novia Scotia. Mention has been made of these bewhiskered trout, or mustached bass or whatever they are, but by now the conductor is beginning to believe that perhaps he is being kidded. It seems that they run wild in the waters of Nova Scotia, feddling preferably on submarine wheat cakes and wild water lilies. This is what makes them wild, for there are no water lilies in Nova Scotia. Their age is judged by the length of their whiskers, and all they have to do to renew their youth is get a shave.

Wes either should pay my fare up to Nova Scotia to see them, or else bring down a handful of the hirsute finnies for us to take a look.

The latest idiocy down in the Home of the Yokels, yclept, New York City, is the talking marathon, sometimes known as the Tonsil Trek, or the Mumbling Marathon. The idea is that the contestants keep talking without any stop until their own words choke them, and the one who keeps muttering the longest wins the prize. It is the descendant of the Dance Marathon, the Bunion Derby and other such shenanigans and only proves that they're not all dead yet.

Why not a buckwheat cake eating marathon? Or a sauerkraut and weiner contest, or a soup gargling race. The ideas for things of this sort are limitless.

Years ago, before these marathon contests were popularized, a gang of us on the South Side held a butter milk drinking contest. In those days we loafed in the back of Jim Houston's store and I've always though that the reason he went out of business was because of the cakes we ate off him.

The gang was in session one evening, Bill Houston, Tom Perrott, Bill Pritchard, Hubert Llewellyn, Jack Evans, Jack Love, Walter Ashton and perhaps a few more, when some smart youth conceived the idea of a butter milk drinking contest, with Mr. Houston all unwittingly furnishing the butter milk.

After seven schooners of the sour lacteal delight, I felt as though I had swallowed the Atlantic Ocean, but seven didn't win the prize. Jack Evans won it with eight. The prize was another glass of buttermilk.

The only difference between that contest and these present day marathons is that we didn't charge admisison to the foolishness. The door was locked.

Statesmen who can't think up a way to dam the Colorado might consult fluent natives of the Mississippi valley.

Hundred Per Cent Increase In Legion Membership Here

Larger Gain Is Anticipated; Expect To Have Encouraging Report For Commander

The present membership of the Perry S. Gaston Post No. 343 of this city now stands one hundred per cent ahead of last year's membership, W. R. Allen, chairman of the Legion's membership has announced. There are now 120 legionnaires at the local post.

Chairman Allen states that he believes the membership will grow still larger up to the time the national American Legion commander, Paul V. McNutt, visits New Castle. He expects to make an encouraging report of the post's membership at the next meeting of the local post on January 4.

It is planned to have all membership team members present at that meeting shortly after the beginning of the new year. An intensive campaign to secure the balance of last year's members will be initiated at this time.
